HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Show opens to the public today, with up to a half million visitors expected at the new exposition facilities through Jan. 18.

"There seems to be a tremendous amount of interest in coming to see what we've constructed over the past year," said Dennis Grumbine, Farm Show director.

He was referring to the $86 million dollar expansion and renovation project in which 54 major constructions firms worked together under the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Department of General Services to roughly double the size of the Farm Show Complex.

'Illustrated Cow' Sculpture Pays Tribute To Farm Show

ANDY ANDREWS

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Eight hundred pounds of butter, donated by Land O'Lakes, can certainly put an aura on an icon.

The Pennsylvania Farm Show Butter Sculpture, unveiled Thursday morning, details the "illustrated cow" — a huge bovine carved with tattoos of various Pennsylvania agriculture and Farm Show traditions.

The cow, sculpted from butter by Jim Victor, Conshohocken, is illustrated by rodeos, square dancing, a tractor, an apple pie, and other items. It bears a 4-H logo on its udder. The cow even CATTLE: Compared to Thursday, slaughter steers sold steady to .50 higher; with the bulk of the increase on Monday's prices. The bulk of the run was made up of slightly over-finished stock, which was carrying some fill. However, buyers did not shy away from the weigh-ups as the bulk of the Choice steers still brought from mostly 74.00-76.00 in relatively active trading. Many producers are trying to hold their steers until later this winter as the February live cattle contract at the CME is currently above 80.00; which is expected to add continued support this winter. This seems logical, although when held too long the fancy 1200-1300 lb steer turns into a 1400-1600 lbs overweight Yield Grade 4 or 5; which will no doubt be discounted. A small test of Holstein steers sold with a firmer undertone on Monday, with not enough on Tuesday for a market test. An attractive run of slaughter heifers sold nearly 1.00 higher on Monday, with Tuesday's light supply not tested.

Slaughter cows sold weak to .75 lower. Buyer attendance was good, but the trade never seemed to catch fire. Slaughter bulls sold steady to firm on a good run. The supply included 34 percent steers, 7 percent heifers, 54 percent cows, 5 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
January 8, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Export optimism and fund buying on the Boards were supportive today as grain and soybean bids moved upward. Wheat 1 to 13 cents higher. Corn 4 to 6 cents higher. Sorghum 9 to 10 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 2 cents higher.

Egypts substantial wheat purchase overnight was just what wheat bids needed. Light technical buying was noted in wheat pits in reaction to the sale.

Corn and soybean bids continued to advance due to fund buying and talks of improved export interest in the works. China is expected to need soy- beans or bean by-products which has bids climbing higher. Some weather concerns continued to support bids as most areas where winter wheat is growing remain dry as well as the Corn Belt Region. Traders also await government reports due out later in the week.

Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL YOUNG TURKEY PARTS AND BULK MEAT, Frozen, unless specified, cents per lb, delivered first receivers, part and full trucklots, as of Jan. 7.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

FULL WOLF MOON, JAN. 18

FULL WOLF MOON

Called by some the Full Winter Moon, the Full Wolf Moon this January 18 signals a time of long, cold nights Early Native Americans had a bevy of remedies for the colds chills, and chilblains that came at this time of year Onions often predominated, whether added to a restorative gruel, made into a plaster for the chest, roasted and applied hot to the feet for chilblains, or juiced for cough syrups and ear drops For chills, hot rocks at the feet, warm blankets and hot teas made with sage, peppermint, or yarrow were prescribed

If cold winds reach you through a hole, say your prayers and mind your soul.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Cloth dish towels can spread germs; let your dishes air-dry in a rack instead.

2 pounds yellow onions, thinly sliced (about 7 cups)
1 teaspoon salt

French bread slices
grated Parmesan cheese (optional)

Melt butter in a 5-quart stockpot, then add oil, onions, and salt Sauté over low heat for 20 minutes Sprinkle flour over onions and cook for a few more minutes Transfer onions to a dish Add stock to pot and heat to simmering Return onions to pot and simmer for 30 minutes Add pepper Just before serving, toast French bread If desired, sprinkle cheese on the bread and melt the cheese under the broiler Add bread to soup

OPINION

A Tradition (Although With Some Big Changes) Continues

Today we kick off the annual Pennsylvania Farm Show. We may get upward of 400,000 people at the country's largest indoor agricultural event.

The economic impact of the Farm Show Complex activities is significant to the Harrisburg region: about $480 million annually.

That's big dollars. And they're hoping you spend it.

The work should be far from over, however. The Farm Show still needs a major hotel nearby. The closest hotel is far from walking distance. Who wants to rely on shuttle service through Farm Show weather for a place to sleep?

Also, an aboveground, multistory parking garage would make parking a lot more ideal on sight.

Those should be the next additions to the complex.

Some old-timers to this year's big event at the complex should be aware of some major changes in the schedule. The dairy shows are on Friday instead of Tuesday. The sale of champions is Tuesday morning instead of Thursday.

Also, the big FFA Mid-Winter Convention, normally on Monday afternoon in the Large Arena, is now in the Banquet Hall (where the old Family Living exhibits were in the old part of the Northeast Upper Floor) on Monday. The Family Living exhibits are now in the old main hall.

These changes are going to take some getting used to! This will be a learning curve for all of us.

Despite these major changes and renovations, we sincerely believe the fun times and friendships of Farm Show will continue. We hope you make Farm Show a part of your visit — if simply out of curiosity — if not to see old friends.

Stop by and see us at booth 359 in the Expo Hall.

We hope you have some fun!

To Participate In 2002 Census Of Agriculture

In late December, the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) mailed out census forms to all farmers and ranchers across the country to collect data on the 2002 year. From 1840 to 1920, the Census of Agriculture was taken every 10 years. Since 1925 the census has been taken about every 5 years.

The 2002 Census of Agriculture is the Nation's 26th census. For the census, a farm is defined as any place from which $1,000 or more of agricultural products were produced and sold, or normally would have been sold, during the census year.

The census is very important since it is the only source of uniform data on agricultural production and operator characteristics for each county, state, and the U.S. It is a measurement of where farmers stand, their production costs and cropping systems, their farm supply needs, and how trends are changing. Because of the importance of this information, Congress requires NASS to conduct the Census of Agriculture every five years.

Farmers are guaranteed by law that their individual information will be kept confidential. NASS uses the information only for statistical purposes and publishes data only in tabulated totals. Your report cannot be used for purposes of taxation, investigation, or regulation. The law also provided that copies retained in your files are immune from legal process. The privacy of individual census records is also protected from disclosure through the Freedom of Information Act. Under this same law, NASS employees are subject to severe penalties if they release data on individual operations. NASS safeguards the privacy of operators' responses and will not disclose any data about an individual farm operation.

Many different groups use the information gleaned from the census. Farm organizations use the census data to evaluate and propose policies and programs that help the agricultural producer. Farm cooperatives, commodity and trade associations, and agribusinesses use the data to develop market strategies and to determine locations of facilities that will serve agricultural producers.

Federal Government policymakers use the Census of Agriculture data in drafting legislation to help resolve agricultural problems. State and local governments use the data for planning rural development, agricultural research, and extension programs. For planners and economists, the Census of Agriculture provides benchmark data for current statistical series such as the Gross Domestic Product, Producer Price Index, and Farm Income Accounts that are produced by the USDA and other organizations, such as the Bureau of Labor Statistics and Bureau of Economic Analysis.

An individual producer can use the information to determine which products are limited and which ones are heavily produced in his area. This can be very valuable, especially in evaluating new niche market opportunities. Individuals can also be guided by the data when making decisions on competitive market pricing, farming trends, and new technologies.

You can find Census of Agriculture data on the Internet at www.usda.gov/nass/ by clicking on "Census of Agriculture." You can also find Census of Agriculture data through local NASS State offices, many depository libraries, universities, and other state government offices.

For more information on the Census of Agriculture or any NASS surveys, call the NASS hotline at (800) 727-9540.

United States law requires all those who receive a census report form to respond even if they did not operate a farm or ranch in 2002. Completed report forms are due Feb. 3, 2003. Take some time on one of these cold winter days to sit in the warm and fill out the survey and send it back. A response from everyone is needed to make the census valuable.

EVERYONE NEEDS A 'BETHANY'

Background Scripture:
Luke 10:38-42; John 11:20-32.
Devotional Reading:
John 15:12-17.

In one of my former parishes there was a warm and receptive home where I received as much or more help than I gave there. It was not that there weren't many other homes in my parish that were "warm" and "receptive," but this one was for me a special place. In a sense, it was my "Bethany."

Mary, Martha, and Lazarus are mentioned only in two of the gospels. Luke 10:38-42 tells us of an incident during which Jesus was received in the home of Mary and Martha. It is in John 11:20-32 that we learn that they live in Bethany, a small town just two miles outside Jerusalem, and John adds a brother, Lazarus.

Obviously, their home was a very special place for Jesus and they were friends as well as followers. But that doesn't mean they were perfect. In Luke we see a clash of temperaments that are probably quite familiar to most of us. We all know someone like Martha who becomes so involved in her hospitality that she misses the opportunity to learn more from the Master.

Also, like many people who want to do "something for us," resentment may creep: "Lord, do you not care that my sister has left me to serve alone?" (Lk. 10:39), a rebuke of her sister, but it also a muted one to Jesus, for he was keeping Mary from doing her share of the work! But Jesus replies with deep understanding of Martha (and us!): "Martha, Martha, you are anxious and troubled about many things; one thing is needful. Mary has chosen the good portion. . . ." (10: 41).

Feeding Our Own Egos

When Jesus says, "one thing is needful," he is probably not saying that Martha's preparations are not worthwhile, but that she is overdoing it. A simple meal would be more appropriate. While he appreciates her efforts, he knows that she may also be unconsciously feeding her own ego.

Look at what I'm doing, Jesus, and I'm not even getting any help from my lazy sister! So are we, like Martha, also "distracted from much serving," so "anxious and troubled about many things" that we miss out in our relationships with spouses, children, and others? We need a balance between sheer busyness for Christ and quiet receptivity of Christ, for John assures us that Jesus loved both Mary and Martha (Jn. 11:5).

If we can identify with Luke 10, I think we can also find ourselves in John 11. When Lazarus becomes seriously ill, Martha and Mary send word to Jesus, "Lord, he whom you love is ill" (11:3). But, after assuring us that he loved this family, John tells us: "So, when he had heard that he was ill, he stayed two days longer in the place that he was" (11:6). Questioned by his disciples at this unconscionable delay, Jesus implies that a greater purpose is to be served than if he would leave for Bethany immediately.

If You Had Come!

By the time he arrives there, Lazarus has already been in the tomb four days.

Martha greets Jesus with an exclamation of both faith and reproach. "Lord, if you had been here, my brother would not have died." (11:21). Yes, I have faith in you, Jesus, but why didn't you come? Can you not hear your own voice speaking those words: Yes, Lord, I know this will all be resolved in the kingdom of heaven, but I want help now!

When Martha replies, her assurance is not in the knowledge of what Jesus will do, but in what he is — "Yes, Lord; I believe that you are the Christ, the Son of God. . . ." (11:28). She trusts Jesus even though she does not understand why he has seemed to fail them. She doesn't realize that during those two days he was responding to her prayer. In all likelihood, he was praying for, standing at the tomb of Lazarus, although he had not been seen to pray, Jesus says, "Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me. . . ."

Even though God does not seem to respond to our prayers, and when he responds it may be in some way different from what we asked, he does not delay and he will be with us in our own Bethany.

U.S. DAIRY TRADE OUT OF BALANCE IN 2002

- Imports were nearly double exports.
- Cheese category very strong.
- MPC imports less significant

Welcome to a new year! Markets will return to normal activity next week. We should be able to get a more accurate read on weekly market activity at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange once all the players are back in town.

Last week's Dairy Market News, a weekly dairy publication of USDA, had some interesting trade news for 2002. For the months of January through September, the dollar value of dairy imports was $1,187.5 million, compared to an export value of $674.3 million. In other words, on a dollar value basis, we imported nearly double what we exported during the first nine months of 2002.

The data shows that the single largest category of imports in 2002 was cheese. On a dollar basis, it accounted for nearly half of all imports ($565.8 million). That category was followed by casein ($325.8 million) and then Milk Protein Concentrates, or MPCs ($91.6 million).

The trouble with the export side is that no single category amounted to the value of imports of cheese or casein. For example, the biggest export categories for January through September 2002 were cheese and curd ($122.2 million), whey ($110.6 million), nonfat dry milk ($68.3 million), and ice cream ($61.7 million). None of these categories comes anywhere near [illegible] $500 million of cheese and casein imports.

The National Milk Producers Federation notes in their quarterly report Import Watch (http://www.nmpf.org/files/ImportWatch---3rd—Quarter.pdf) that imports of American-type cheese for the months January through September 2002 grew 219 percent and exceeded the safeguard trigger level. Their data indicates these imports totaled 22,177 metric tons for this period. They alerted USDA of this, and USDA responded by slapping higher tariffs on American-type cheese imports. The impact of this, however, may be limited since, according to USDA numbers, American cheese imports amounted to just 14 percent of total cheese imports during this period by weight.

The other big surprise from

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
January 8, 2003
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.3590-1.4949. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.3590-1.4949 mostly 1 3817-1.4043.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9500-1.0300; Class III - spot prices - .8000-.8700.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week: In 15, Out 0; last week: In 0, Out 27; last year: In 80, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week: In 0, Out 0; last week: In 0, Out 0; last year: In 0, Out 0.

The following are the December 2002 Class and component prices under the Federal Milk Order pricing system: Class II $11.62 (up $0.36 from November), Class III $9.74 (down $0.10); and Class IV $10.49 (down $0.09). The following are the product price averages used in computing Class prices: butter $1.0926, NDM $0.8682, cheese $1.1203, and dry whey $0.1965. The Class II butterfat price is $1.1992 and the Class III/IV butterfat price is $1.1922.

Milk production is steady to slightly higher in most parts of the region. Florida's output has slowed temporarily as cold weather hit the state early this week. Frost was common across much of the state on Wednesday morning. Two storms moved quickly through the Northeast this past weekend and at midweek. Snow accumulations ranged up to 18 inches in spots and there were some delays in farm pick-ups and other transportation schedules. The forecasts of storms set off another bout of panic buying. Bottlers were very busy over the weekend and most added on to their orders for milk. The combination of refilling the school lunch pipelines and the storms had most bottlers running "full tilt" right through midweek. This improved Class I demand greatly reduced the volumes of surplus milk in the region. Butter/powder plants that were operating on extended schedules during the holidays are back to moderate operations now and some balancing plants were idled early this week. However, the butter producing portion of these plants are still churning moderate to heavy volumes of cream.

The condensed skim market isn't as weak now that the holiday milk and condensed have eased back to more normal levels. Less distressed loads are clearing. Prices are still rather low and some users are looking at NDM as a less expensive alternative. Suppliers are often lowering prices to meet the NDM market, just to keep product moving.

The fluid cream market remains weak. However, some ice cream plants are back on line after several weeks off. This is helping to ease the cream glut, but the heavier milk bottling and standardizing is creating more cream at those plants. However, cream volumes are still excessive of Class II demand and some suppliers are still shipping a big percentage of their supply to the Midwest for churning. Demand is fair and prices often lower due to a decline in multiples and the CME average price of butter. A few scattered reports of higher multiples were noted. Cream cheese output is about steady and producers are still looking for attractively priced spot loads. Ice cream production is increasing for the "holiday lull" now that plants get back on line. Churning activity is still quite heavy at those plants that are churning. Cream suppliers report that some butter makers are paying rather low multiples for any cream that is offered to them.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER Summary for week ending Jan. 3, 2003. Total Receipts: 84,600. Direct 34,200. Video/Internet 21,100. Auctions 29,300. This week's reported auction volume included 57 percent over 600 lbs and 46 percent heifers.

Feeder cattle marketing was too light, again this week, to establish a national price trend. Business should return to normal next week as auction and direct sales are both expected to be large. The few country sales and auctions that were reported by the USDA's Livestock Market News Service this week mostly had a higher undertone.

The two week holiday break did not unveil any news or data that would cause the cattle markets to head south. In fact, feedlots received market leverage for Christmas and the fat cattle market exited the holidays 3.00 higher than it entered and dressed sales gained 5.00. The five major feeding areas sold near 210,000 head of slaughter steers and heifers late this week at mostly 75.00 live and 118.00 in the beef.

The best feeder cattle demand remains to be for heavyweights as buyers are aggressive for anything that will finish near April. On New Year's Day at the St. Joseph Stockyards in Missouri, a load of 1000 lb steers 83.00 and a comparable load weighing 700 lbs brought 87.50. April CME Live Cattle Futures ended the week at 79.97 but the June contracts closed at 72.95, which makes those 700 lb steers look risky.

The El Nino phenomenon has left the upper half of the US with an abnormally warm and dry start to the winter. Meanwhile, the southern portion of the country has already seen a whole season's worth of moisture. Springfield, MO posted a record for the most snow ever in the month of December at 20 inches. Further north, ranchers and backgrounders in the upper Midwest are running out of water as they watch their ponds freeze dry, leaving many praying for any type of moisture — even a snowstorm.

Farm Show Provides All Three For Sheep Exhibitor

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

RAWLINSVILLE (Lancasster Co.) — With "Cotton," Jaymi McMichael had a double winner.

Not only did Jaymi win the Corriedale three years ago in a contest conducted by the Pennsylvania Corriedale Association, but the animal came in a with big win at the 2002 Farm Show, taking home the champion Corriedale ewe placing in the junior show.

Now Jaymi, 13, in eighth grade in Penn Manor School District, is following that win by taking another two Corriedales, just purchased this year, to the show ring.

She purchased "Peaches" and "Savannah" in August and October and began walking them, readying them for the Farm Show, during Christmas break — practices that she will do more frequently as the event quickly approaches.

The sheep will head to Harrisburg on Wednesday, and Jaymi will show them on Thursday and Friday. The points that she may earn in the show ring will be totaled with her Skillathon and showmanship scores to compete for the shepherd's contest.

She is, in fact, anticipating spending a lot of time in Harrisburg during this year's Farm Show.

The event is not only a place of competition but also of learning, she said. Watching the different breeds of sheep and cattle and talking to industry people — such as the people she bought her sheep from — has proven to be a big help with her show ring career.

However the time spent at the show is not all work. The social life — connecting with her 4-H and FFA friends — is also a great part of the show, admits Jaymi. She combined fun with work last year, for instance, when she and a friend did their homework on the roof of the trailer.

Other work may include helping out at the Pennsylvania Fruit and Vegetable Growers stand, since her parents, Steve and Julie, are members of the organization.

Besides bags of groceries already sitting in the house or tucked away in the freezer, a new toaster oven awaits a trip to the Farm Show, according to Julie. Jaymi plans on staying overnight at the complex.

Back home on the farm, the McMichaels have seven sheep which are bred for the show ring. Breeds include a Suffolk crossbred, Hampshires, and Corriedales. "Cotton," "Candy," "Lollipop," and "Peaches" are a part of the sweet-sounding flock.

Jaymi's own sheep showing career began six years ago as she followed in the footsteps of her brother, Dan, 20. Before that she had exhibited cattle but wanted to try her hand at exhibiting sheep, which she began three years ago.

Winning "Cotton" by writing an essay for the Pennsylvania Corriedale Association's contest helped to launch Jaymi into the sheep ring in a big way. Although Corriedales, as a wool breed, are "more work" than readying a market lamb for the ring, Jaymi enjoys showing the breed.

"They have a different attitude than other sheep," she said. "They're easier to work with."

In addition, they are easy keepers. "Last year Cotton had her lamb on her own, and we didn't even know it" until they found the little lamb that Jaymi showed as a market lamb at a local fair.

The work aspect is a consideration, however.

"For market lambs, you just shave the wool, but for Corriedales you trim the wool, then wash up to the stomach line," she said. Then exhibitors make the rest of the wool dirty to show the whiteness of the wool underneath and the crimp.

Clay mixed with water, mill or grain dust, or even some paints are used to make the newly-trimmed wool look "dirty," the way Corriedales are properly shown.

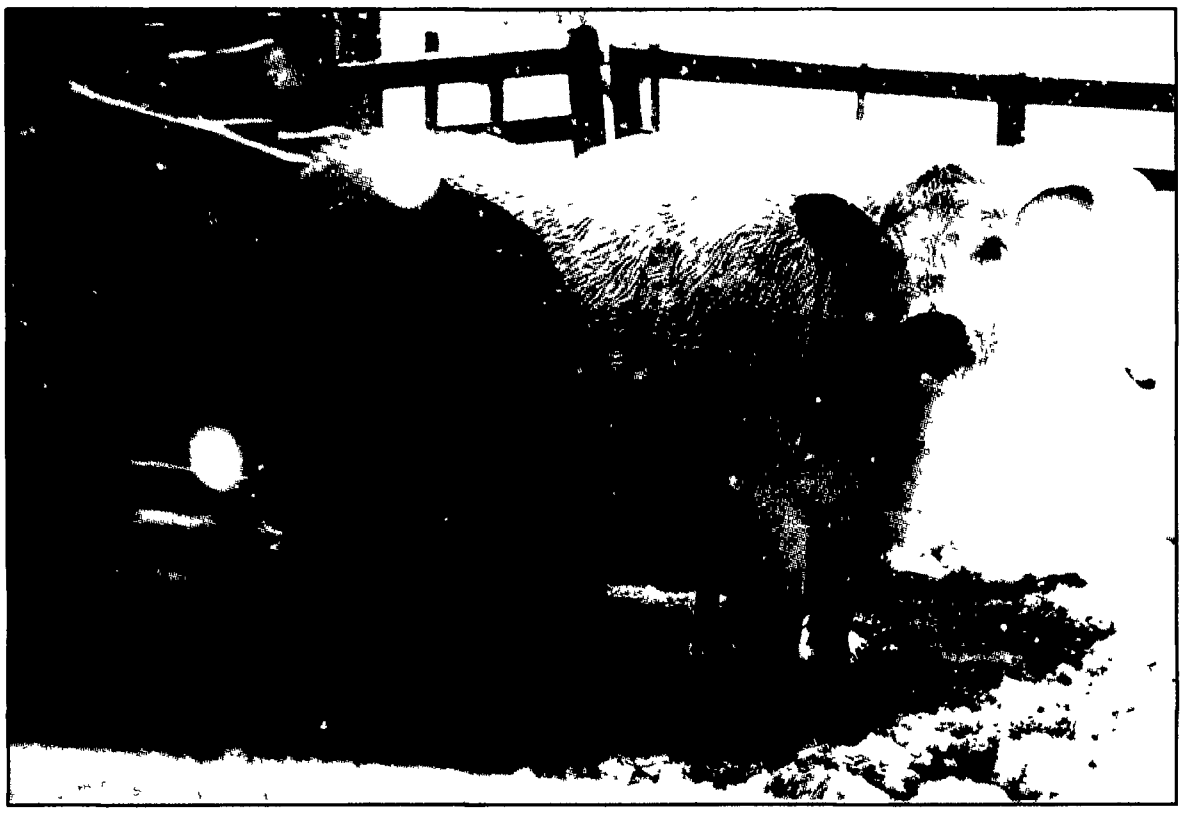
When Jaymi got her lamb from the Corriedale association, she attended a clinic they sponsored to learn how to fit her sheep — a process that is still ongoing, she says.

The sheep must be trimmed to show height, a wide rear end and smaller front end. "It's a lot more than just slicking them down, when what you see is what you get," such as in the market lamb competition, according to Julie.

Jaymi McMichael hopes to build on "Cotton's" win last year at the Farm Show.

In addition to sheep, she owns three head of cattle herself. However there are eight head in all, since the family also raises beef to sell.

Fourteen-acre Thistle Rock Farm is rented out for corn production. The McMichaels also use the land for pastures and for growing the strawberries and raspberries that they sell at roadside.



Several cattle join the sheep at Thistle Rock Farm. The British White Park (at right), "Libby," is a family favorite.

Hower Family Takes 'Just Enuff' Angus To Farm Show

DEANNA CUNFER
Carbon Co. Correspondent

BETHLEHEM (Northampton Co.) — How many is just enough Angus? Of course the answer to that question varies with each farm or ranching operation.

The Hower family of Just Enuff Angus, Bethlehem - parents Ned and Linda and daughters Jennifer, 18, and Jamie, 21 - has yet to determine that magical number. Each time they feel they have reached a comfortable limit to their operation, an outstanding heifer catches their eye and soon joins the herd.

According to Linda, it was she that kept saying 10 animals was "just enuff" when the herd had grown to that number but she is often smitten by some young heifer's looks or pedigree and, before long, the herd size grew again. In fact, Ned has become cautious of sending the women of the family to shows without him, in fear of what they might bring home. Much to Ned's dismay, Linda and the girls came home with a puppy from a recent show that Ned was unable to attend. But before long, Expo - named after the show from where he came - won Ned's approval and has since become a part of the family.

Often times, the new addition to the herd goes on to bring ribbons and honors home from the various shows where the family exhibits their animals. Having exhibited in the bred-and-owned heifer and bull, owned heifer, cow/calf, and market steer competitions in both the junior and open divisions at shows ranging from the local 4-H round-up to state and national level shows, Jennifer and Jamie have made their presence known. Their animals have been selected champions at many prestigious shows, including the Pennsylvania Farm Show where the family has been a mainstay in the Angus part of the beef barns for the past six years.

In addition to the Pennsylvania Farm Show, some of the shows where both girls have exhibited include the Plainfield Farmers' Fair, the Pennsylvania Fair, Eastern Pennsylvania 4-H Livestock Show and Sale at Blue Valley Farm Show, the New Jersey State Fair, and the Warren County Fair. A few of the state and national level shows where the girls have shown are the Pennsylvania Angus Breeders Show, Atlantic National ROV Angus Show, and the Eastern Regional Angus Show. Jamie has also exhibited at the National Junior Show in Wisconsin and the MAJAC show.

Jennifer, a senior at Nazareth High School with plans to pursue a career in elementary special education, has shown at the Pennsylvania Farm Show for the past five years. Jen, as she is known to her friends, has previously competed in the market steer, bred-and-owned heifer and owned heifer classes, and this year will be taking a steer and a few of her heifers to Harrisburg in January.

Having completed such 4-H projects as entomology, basketry, vegetable gardening, and horse production as well as market steer and breeding beef on the local level, Jen recently returned from Georgia where she served as the 2002 female delegate for Northampton County at the National 4-H Congress in Atlanta. She has also worked as a 4-H camp counselor for the past several years and is looking forward to again serving as a counselor this summer as she completes her last year of 4-H eligibility.

Having exhibited an entomology project and her cattle at the Farm Show in the past, she has made many close friends through her involvement with the 4-H program and the Pennsylvania Junior Angus Association. Jen said she enjoys going to the different fairs and shows throughout the year because there are always new people to meet and old friends to see. She feels her involvement in 4-H has led to what she calls some "incredible friendships" that will last a lifetime along with the numerous memories they share.

When not working with her cattle, Jen enjoys swimming and snow skiing. She has been a member of her school's swim team and works as a life guard at the local "Y." She served as the Plainfield Farmers' Fair Queen this past summer and has considered the possibility of competing for the Pennsylvania Angus Queen position in the future, but for now she prefers to just enjoy showing and meeting friends as she shows her Angus, and will wait to see what the future brings.

Jamie, although no longer eligible to show as a 4-H member, will be exhibiting four heifers in the open competition at the Pennsylvania Farm Show this January. She feels that number is "just enuff" to care for this year as she will not only be in the showring as an exhibitor, but also as the retiring Pennsylvania Angus Queen and as a member of the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA) Board of Directors.

As Jamie winds down her reign as Pennsylvania Angus Queen, she feels her best memory or experience of her term was the opportunity to attend the many Angus shows, not only in her home state but across the nation, promoting Pennsylvania Angus. She also enjoyed the chance to meet so many young junior Angus members, and feels it was a wonderful chance to meet new people and make lifelong friends.

Although she has only been a director on the NJAB (National Junior Angus Board) for six months, she said she has already learned so much about the Angus industry that it is difficult to choose her favorite experience. She feels the most important aspect of being on the board is the chance to meet so many young breeders and share the opportunities that she has been given in her career. Jamie has already traveled to California, Missouri, Kentucky, and, most recently, Ohio, as part of her duties on the board.

During the years Jamie has shown her cattle, the most memorable championships she has won include when her heifer was named the Champion Owned Heifer at the 2001 Pennsylvania Angus Breeders Show, a title she always dreamed of winning; when her bred-and-owned heifer was named the Champion Bred-and-Owned Heifer and Reserve Champion Junior Heifer at the 2000 Pennsylvania Farm Show; and when her bull was named the Champion Bred-and-Owned Bull at the 2000 Atlantic National ROV Angus Show.

Jennifer plays with the family dog, Expo, on a cold brisk day. Expo was a surprise purchase at one of the shows where the Howers showed their cattle.

Jamie Hower, 21, with one of her bred-and-owned heifer champions. Jamie is the retiring Pennsylvania Angus Queen and also a recently appointed member of the National Junior Angus Board of Directors.

While Jamie completes her term on the NJAB, her educational and career plans are on hold simply because of the tremendous amount of time spent traveling throughout the country fulfilling her duties as a board member - a terrific educational experience in itself. Currently a student at Northampton Community College, her plans include keeping her Angus herd growing and finishing a business degree.

Both Jen and Jamie have received greatly appreciated help and support from their parents and grandparents throughout their 4-H careers. Both maternal and paternal sides of their family tree have involvement in 4-H.

Linda spent over 20 years as herdswoman at Maple Grove Farms near Bath, the family owned and operated dairy of her parents, C. Herbert and Mabel Guest, and uncle and aunt, Kenneth and Carol Miller. After graduation from Penn State with an animal science degree, she assumed the duties of herdswoman. As those who are familiar with the dairy industry know, if you grow up in the business you become involved in all aspects of the operation. As Linda says, "Pretty much whatever needed to be done, if I was capable I did it."

Having handled the registration and A.I. breeding of the dairy herd with 160 in milk and a total herd count of around 300, Linda naturally moved into nearly the same role with the Hower's Angus herd.

Linda was a 4-H member for nine years, during which time she completed horse and baby beef projects. Later, she served as leader of the livestock and potato clubs. She showed a market steer at the Farm Show in her last year of 4-H, although her fondest memory was when she qualified for the district horse show in jumping. Her mother, brothers, sister, uncle, and cousins also completed dairy or beef projects while 4-H members.

Ned's family has also been active in 4-H. Ned, along with his parents, brother, and sister have shown 4-H animals. His parents, Paul and Rachel Hower, were 4-H leaders for 31 years, and received the J. Ira Coble Award during the 1992 Pennsylvania Farm Show - a great honor to the family. Ned himself had been a 4-H member for 10 years and showed at the Pennsylvania Farm Show for six or seven years. He has been a 4-H leader for five years in the livestock club and potato judging.

Both Ned and Linda said they felt their proudest moments as parents in respect to their daughters' 4-H careers were when Jennifer was selected to attend the national 4-H Congress and when Jamie was named to the National Junior Angus Board of Directors. Of course, both mentioned the terrific feeling of winning the many bred-and-owned heifer and bull championships.

What started in 1995 with Jamie's first registered Angus heifer purchase, Ideals Black Magic who, along with her daughters, has produced many bred-and-owned heifers for Jamie and several champion titles for those who bought her offspring, has grown to a herd of 29, with 18 calves expected in 2003.

That question of how many is "just enuff Angus" still hasn't been answered and probably won't be for quite a while as the Howers enjoy their cattle and watch the young calves develop into prospective candidates for a successful show career.

this data was that on a volume and value basis, MPC imports accounted for a small percent of total imports. For example, on a dollar value basis, MPC imports amounted to just 8 percent of total cumulative imports in 2002. That said, MPC imports were up 21 percent in 2002 relative to the same January through September period in 2001.

So, what does this all mean? Here are my thoughts:

1. Imports are not evil. Remember, we have a goal of exporting dairy products. One cannot have the hope of exporting dairy products without offering market access to other countries.

2. USDA should enforce safeguard provisions. This safeguard provision was part of our trade agreement with other countries. If imports of any one category exceeded a certain level, we had the ability to issue new tariffs to show down imports. It was only appropriate that USDA used this provision on American type cheese imports.

3. What is the deal with casein and MPC? These two product categories are not subject to the tariff-rate quota regime that other dairy products are. Why? Does it make sense to import lower-valued MPCs, increase government stocks of nonfat dry milk, lower the support price of nonfat dry milk, and then dump excess government inventory of nonfat dry milk on the domestic and global markets? These two categories should be dealt with in the new trade round talks.

4. Investigate new options for the dairy price support program. This program is certainly broken. First, we had to lower the support price of nonfat dry milk since we were importing so much lower valued MPC that government stocks of powder went through the roof. But the dairy price support program potentially robs domestic processors of experimenting with production of MPC. Also, cheese market prices have clearly been below support price levels. Why haven't cheese processors used the dairy price support program?

5. A final thought. Don't believe the press accounts that imports represent so many tanker truck loads of milk flooding our borders. Unfortunately, the real story is much more complex. First, we don't import tanker loads of milk. We import dairy products that contain select dairy components. The conversion of dairy imports to tanker loads of milk is simply an illustration, a rather poor one at that. A better idea is to gather all relevant trade data and simply add up how much quantity and value of imports are actually coming into our borders. That can then be compared to exports, or to imports in other years. That is the approach National Milk is taking.

The next step would be to add up how many pounds of milkfat and nonfat solids this presents. The third step would be to evaluate the impact of these imports on domestic production and prices of, say, cheese and butter. This approach demands research and hard work, not quick calculations and scathing editorials.

Those are my thoughts!

STRATEGIES FOR A THRIVING FARM BUSINESS

The beginning of a New Year often brings a New Year's Resolution. Have you thought about one for 2003?

Have you considered an educational program focused on an important area of your farm, or overcoming those key business challenges in the coming year?

I would encourage you to examine the health of your business. What are the weak areas in your business plan? Where is the biggest opportunity to improve your bottom line?

Plan ahead to meet those challenges in 2003. Budget this year to invest in yourself and attend a few educational programs that will meet those challenges and strengthen the health of your business.

An upcoming program you may have an interest in attending to improve key areas of interest is The Lancaster Chamber's Farm Business Symposium: "Strategies for a Thriving Farm Business." This program is aimed at today's farm and agri-business managers and offers a one-day comprehensive training program that will teach you successful business strategies and techniques applicable to your farming operation. You will hear from experts in the areas of finance, human resources, public relations, business succession and estate planning, and strategic business planning. During the morning and afternoon sessions you will have the opportunity to choose one of two programs to attend, with a lunch session for all attendees.

Remember to invest in your business by attending educational programs which will explore those areas of your business that have the biggest opportunity for improvement. Along with the educational sessions, the Farm Business Symposium includes a continental breakfast, lunch, and Resource Guide, which highlights all the programs covered during the day. The cost for the Farm Business Symposium is $75 for Chamber members and $100 for nonmembers.

Miller Named Vice Chairman Of Ag Committee

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A vocal advocate for agriculture and other issues facing Pennsylvania's rural communities, Rep. Sheila Miller (R-129) has been appointed vice chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee for a third consecutive term by Speaker of the House Matthew J. Ryan (R-Delaware).

"Agriculture not only puts food on our tables — it also is a driving force in Pennsylvania's economy," Miller said. "I look forward to continuing to help our hard-working farmers maintain agriculture as the top industry in this commonwealth.

Miller has been a strong voice for the agriculture industry since joining the House in 1993. By working her own 150-acre beef cattle farm in Berks County, she has firsthand knowledge of the challenges Pennsylvania farmers face.

In addition to her work on behalf of the state' agriculture industry, Miller will also continue her membership on three other standing committees of the House: Children and Youth, Game and Fisheries, and Tourism and Recreational Development.

"These committee assignments give me the opportunity to address a variety of issues important to the people of Berks County and Pennsylvania as a whole," Miller said.

'Illustrated Cow' Sculpture Pays Tribute To Farm Show

includes a portrait of Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes.

The cow, supported by a steel armature that took two men four and a half days to weld, was sculpted from butter to represent the wide variety of ag activities and competition at the 87th Farm Show.

Said Victor, "It's a very large cow," he noted. "Dairy farmers take their cows very seriously." Victor said he tried to stay true to detail, but apologizes if he has missed anything. He told the more than 100 people assembled at the unveiling Thursday morning, "I hope you'll be forgiving."

Victor created his first butter sculpture at the 1995 Pennsylvania Farm Show with the theme: the anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge of World War II.

For this year's show, Victor began sculpting the butter in late December. He spent about 10 days creating the tribute.

The dairy industry, noted Sam Hayes, state secretary of agriculture, makes up 40 percent of the entire number one industry — agriculture — in the state. The cow represents more than 600,000 cows across the state and more than 9,000 dairy farmers. "The cow represents agriculture in its largest sense and its magnificence," Hayes said.

The butter sculpture is a "timely tribute to the new facilities and traditional activities at the Farm Show Complex," said Laura England, director of communications for Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association.

England noted the sculpture has been a tradition for more than 12 years. "It demonstrates how dairy farmers and dairy processors are working together to bolster dairy's image."

David Noss, vice chairman of the association, noted that dairy is Pennsylvania's number one agricultural industry.

During Thursday morning's ceremony on the south end of the complex, at the McClay Lobby entrance (the former Main Lobby), Hayes and Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Raechel Kilgore spoke of the important role dairy producers play in Pennsylvania agriculture.

Kilgore noted the dairy industry represented $1.5 billion in the state in 2000, making milk the state's "official beverage," she said.

The state is the fourth highest producing dairy state in the nation.

This is the 11th year that Land O'Lakes has donated the butter for the sculpture. Land O'Lakes, a farmer-owned cooperative, represents more than 2,000 Pennsylvania dairy producers.

The butter was manufactured in Carlisle from local dairy producers. An exhibit adjacent to the sculpture showcases how butter is made at the Carlisle plant. Included is a 12-minute video that takes visitors to the exhibit from a farm where the milk is produced, through he receiving area at the plant, and into the processing facilities.

"Our members have been among the exhibitors and visitors to the Farm Show who have kept (the sculpture) popular over the years," noted Chuck Cruickshank, director of procurement, member services and transportation for Land O'Lakes. "We're excited to see the newly expanded Farm Show Complex and look forward to being a part of the Farm Show, which is an excellent medium for showcasing Pennsylvania agriculture to both rural and urban folks in the commonwealth."

Land O'Lakes cooperative posts annual sales of $6 billion, with business in 50 states and more than 50 countries.

At the unveiling, music was provided by the Biglerville High School Jazz Band under the direction of Jamie Cope.

The butter sculpture is sponsored annually by American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, and Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association on behalf of the state's dairy farmers.

Farm Show Celebrates Innovations, Tradition

tons of steel, and 13,500 cubic yards of concrete — enough to build a sidewalk four feet wide and 50 miles long — were used in the new construction, according to Bradley Lambertsen, one of the architects who helped design the new facilities.

Grumbine said the Farm Show staff has been scrambling to work out all the logistics of bringing together hundreds of exhibitors, farm machinery, and several thousand head of livestock under the new venue.

"It's about like setting up the Farm Show for the first time," Grumbine said. "I don't know what that was like, but I'm sure it was a tremendous undertaking."

The principles that have made the Farm Show such a longstanding and popular tradition in the state, though, are still the major purpose of the event, according to Grumbine.

"We're not putting on a 'show' here," he said. "We're just caretakers of an institution. The Farm Show has tremendous value to the rural communities of Pennsylvania."

Sam Hayes, Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture and instrumental in the Farm Show renovations, promised guests that Pennsylvania's strong agricultural heritage would continue to be upheld at the new complex.

"Since the inception of the Farm Show in 1917, the Department of Agriculture and the Farm Show Commission have remained true to their charge of exhibiting the latest agricultural technology, equipment, and other agricultural needs to keep Pennsylvania agriculture strong," Hayes said.

In December, Gov. Schweiker joined Hayes, the state Farm Show Commission, and friends of Pennsylvania agriculture to cut the ribbon on the new construction and renovation of the Farm Show Complex.

This investment in Pennsylvania agriculture will provide the complex with more than a million square feet of combined, all-weather, under-roof exhibitor space. The edifice includes a new Exposition Hall measuring 175,000 square feet, a second large arena, and another livestock barn. A new two-tier concourse connects this new structure to the current Complex.

New agricultural features at the 2003 Farm Show include:

• Farmer Days. To celebrate Pennsylvania's leading agriculture industry, Monday, Jan. 13 through Wednesday Jan. 15 have been designated "Farmer Days." During these three days, farm equipment manufacturers will host seminars and conduct equipment demonstrations in the Large Arena periodically throughout the day. The new Expo Hall will be reserved exclusively for farm equipment. All major manufacturers will be exhibiting at the Farm Show to give Pennsylvania farmers the opportunity to see the latest technologically advanced equipment.

• The Sale of Champions will take place on Tuesday, Jan. 14 at 9 a.m. in the Small Arena (now called the Sale Arena), followed by the awarding of Farm Show Scholarships at 10 a.m., and then the sale of the market swine, steers, lambs, and goats. Champion animals will be placed on display after the sale in the North Building in the Champion Row exhibit, featuring the grand and reserve champion market animals in the beef, lamb, swine, and goat species, and will also recognize the owners and buyers of these winning animals.

• Expanded Agriculture Machinery Displays. Located in the new Exposition Hall, expanded machinery displays will provide farmers and agribusinesses an opportunity to speak with major machinery dealers about their equipment needs.

• Horticultural Center. "Pennsylvania Produce — Simply Delicious" will be on display along with other special features in the new Horticultural Center.

• New horse skill events. A longtime favorite activity of Farm Show is to watch the demonstration teamwork and skill between horse and rider. In addition to the long-time favorite equine events at the farm show, several new events have joined the schedule to include flag racing, team penning, and a more detailed pleasure horse demonstration to illustrate the values of each horse and the breed qualities when considering the purchase of a horse.

• First Frontier Circuit Finals Rodeo. This top-notch professional rodeo will conduct events Thursday, Jan. 16 through Saturday Jan. 18. This rodeo is recognized as a points event where cowboys must earn points to compete in the National Rodeo. This is a ticketed event. For more information contact the Farm Show Complex at (717) 787-5373.

• Dairy Judging School. Sponsored by the Pennsylvania Purebred Dairy Cattle Association (PDCA) on Saturday Jan. 18, dairy judges can participate in the school. Based on their final score, they can become eligible for placement on the Pennsylvania PDCA list of recommended dairy judges, which is circulated to local and regional dairy shows in Pennsylvania.

• New Food Court. A Farm Show favorite, the Farm Show Food Court will be located in the New Expo Hall and will continue to serve its signature foods such as baked potatoes, batter dipped vegetables, and barbeque sandwiches, plus the famous farm show milkshakes.

• Escalators. To make travel easier between the new Expo Hall, New Large Arena, renovated Northeast Building, and the existing complex, escalators are located in the new Main Lobby and at the base of the new connecting corridor.

• Parking. Once again, visitors to the Farm Show will be provided parking space off of Elmerton Avenue, about a half mile from the complex. The price hasn't gone up — parking is still $5. Shuttle buses will provide round-trip transportation from the parking lot to the farm show with pick-up and delivery at the front door.

• Livestock, dairy, poultry, and competitive exhibits at this year's Farm Show will compete for a recordbreaking $380,863 in premiums. The Pennsylvania Farm Show provides more than 325 commercial exhibitors and over 8,000 competitive exhibitors with an opportunity to showcase their products and services to local, national, and international visitors.

For more information about the Farm Show, contact the Farm Show Complex at (717) 787-5373 or access the Pennsylvania Farm Show website through the Pennsylvania PowerPort at www.state.pa.us keyword "Farm Show," or directly at the Department of Agriculture homepage at www.pda.state.pa.us.

New Farmers, New Generation

Pennsylvania Farm Link

WHO WILL BE YOUR SUCCESSOR?

Peter Drucker, a well-known management expert said, "The final test of greatness in a CEO is how well he chooses a successor, and whether he can step aside and let his successor run the company." When you are ready to step aside, do you know who your successor will be?

Many children who grow up on farms have their share of chores and are introduced at a very young age to working on the farm. They learn by doing. In my own family, all the children were expected to help with chores and there never seemed to be enough time in the day. Sometimes I thought my middle name was "Hurry."

Children can absorb a great deal of information by participating on the farm. They gain first-hand knowledge of living and working with family members, being one's own boss, and making important decisions. They also experience the problems that weather, regulation, and globalization of trade have inflicted on the profitability of the farm business.

Good successors do not happen by chance. Most CEOs don't start out as CEOs. Rather, they work their way up through the business and are groomed by interested mentors or founders. We should be doing the same for the successors, or CEOs, of our farms.

Unfortunately, many senior generation farmers are reluctant to discuss farm succession because they may not have come to grips with the idea of stepping down or their own mortality. Or they may not believe that the junior generation is capable of running the farm as well as they did.

If you choose not to discuss farm transfer, you risk the danger of leaving the inevitable to chance. Sooner or later we all have to face our own demise. If you have no plans in place, you may leave the farm highly vulnerable, leaving dissent, disorder, and even failure as your legacy. Make a commitment today to schedule a family meeting and get discussions started. If you haven't discussed the transfer process, sooner is better than later.

Successors also need the opportunity to develop management skills before they take over the operation. Management skills are not inherited. Too often, the senior generation holds onto the checkbook and bank account, leaving the successor poorly prepared to take over or make critical decisions.

In addition to production skills, successors need the opportunity to manage labor, solve problems, understand the financial situation, and make major purchasing decisions. A well-trained heir has experience working in all aspects of the farm business with both the responsibility and the authority to make decisions.

Many options can be used to provide learning opportunities for the successor. The successor can rent a portion of the farm, take responsibility for one of the farm enterprises, start a new enterprise, or rent a portion of the farm. Profit or loss should be the successors. Allow them to learn and make mistakes without jeopardizing the whole operation. More responsibility and authority can be added as they gain experience.

If you would like to learn more about farm succession, attend one of Pennsylvania Farm Link's upcoming workshops: Jan. 22 in Pleasant Gap, Feb. 19 in Manheim, March 10 in Lewistown, or March 11 in Bedford. Call (717) 664-7077 to register for these workshops or for information on farm succession.

CATTLE: Compared to Tuesday, the bulk of the Choice slaughter steers sold fully 1.00 higher; with high Choice and Prime steers as much as 2.00 higher. Bidding was active from the start as buyers knew there were only around 250 head of steers on offer, and if they were going to get a load put together there was no time to waste. There in lied the problem though, as the quality was very mixed; the reputation steers that are usually rock hard Yield Grade 2's or 3's were coming through the chute as soggy Yield Grade 4's. Therefore, buyers had to really sort through the stock to get a uniform sef. Also, with all of the storms and moisture the area has seen the past few weeks, steers are starting to collect quite-a-bit of mud on them; to say nothing of the fill they are carrying. Holstein steers sold 1.00 to as much as 2.00 higher due to the very good demand. There were not a lot of fed heifers on Tuesday's market, however on a small comparison heifers did trend with a higher undertone. The heifer supply also included several head that will grade, but when the grader stamps a Prime or Choice quality grade on the carcass as it swings through the cooler, he will stamp a Yield Grade 4 or 5 right above it. Slaughter cows sold 1.00-2.00 higher, with Breaking cows as much as 3.00 higher. Cow carcass cutout values are leaps and bounds higher, which has kept a fire burning underneath the market. Cow buyer attendance was very good, and with a very attractive run on offer bids matched the supply hit for hit. When compared to Tuesday's very light bull run, slaughter bulls sold sharply higher. The supply included 27 percent steers, 4 percent heifers, 56 percent cows, 4 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

To get ready for a show, Meredith Hennip walks her hogs almost every day. This builds more lean muscle and helps the hogs get used to people.

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

ROME (Bradford Co.) — For Meredith Hennip, January not only marks the start of a new year, it marks the beginning of a new venture. This Northeast Bradford sixth-grader plans to exhibit a hog at the 2003 Pennsylvania Farm Show.

"I've never even been to the hog show at the Farm Show. I'll probably get kind of nervous," she said.

Meredith first got interested in showing hogs when Loyd Ebersole, a friend of her father's, suggested that she and her sister try it. "His brother has a pig farm. He (Ebersole) started talking about pigs and got us interested," said Meredith.

Lloyd's brother, Glen Ebersole, who runs a small hog farm near Duncannon, supplies the girls with their project hogs. In fact, he supplied club pigs to people in 12 Pennsylvania counties and four counties in Maryland last year alone. Glen's son, John, also raises hogs and exhibits them at local fairs and the Farm Show.

"We keep about 30 to 40 sows. We breed them for club pigs and purebreds," said Ebersole. "We sell them all privately. Last year we sold all we had."

Ebersole wants each 4-H member who purchases a pig to succeed, and will help them in any way. By selling the pigs privately, rather than through a sale, he is able to keep prices at a place that most kids can afford.

"I like to see the kids do well with them. There's only one winner at each fair. A lot of kids go out and pay a lot of money for pigs. That doesn't mean they're going to win. They have to take care of them. Genetics count too, but you have to have them ready on the day of the show," he said.

The Hennips enjoy the trip down to his farm every year to pick out the perfect pig for the fairs and shows.

"He usually picks out some of the better ones and my sister and I get to pick from those," said Meredith.

The pigs usually weigh between 40 and 70 pounds when they are purchased.

"We try to figure out what it will look like when it reaches 270 pounds," said Gary Hennip, Meredith's father. "It's a lot like cows. You want them straight across the top with lots of style. You want muscle, but not too much rib. You especially want a stylish head and neck."

Meredith has been exhibiting hogs at the Troy Fair for three years. Her older sister, Elizabeth, also shows hogs at the Troy Fair, but opted not to show at the Farm Show this year. Last July, the sister duo captured grand and reserve grand champion honors with their hog projects at the local fair. The year prior to that, Meredith took home both grand champion honors and the master showman award. She also exhibited a champion hog the first year she took the project.

For this year's farm show, Meredith will

New 'Cool To Be Real' Youth Campaign Kicks Off

NEW YORK, N.Y. — A new checkoff-funded campaign to reach more girls ages 8 to 12 with information about beef is now underway.

The education campaign was kicked off last week with a media tour of key publications in the New York City area by Mary Young, R.D., executive director for nutrition at the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) and Sylvia Rimm, Ph.D., child psychologist and author of See Jane Win.

The campaign is being coordinated by NCBA on behalf of the Cattlemen's Beef Board and state beef councils.

The tour provided a valuable opportunity for national youth media to better understand key issues relevant to young girls, according to Gary Sharp, a South Dakota beef and dairy producer and chairman of the beef industry's Joint Youth Education and Information Subcommittee. Topics covered included: the critical role nutrition plays in girls' physical and intellectual performance, the nutritional benefits of beef as well as some of the obstacles that girls confront during the pre-adolescent and adolescent years, such as peer pressure.

During the tour, Young stressed the importance of the nutrients in beef, especially for this age group, sometimes called "tweens." She also addressed the issues of vegetarianism and obesity among children today. During the meetings, youth development expert Rimm provided messages on the impact of peer pressure, body image and weight issues on self-esteem.

While much of the new youth campaign will focus on the enjoyment of eating beef, research with youth editors shows that they are hesitant to provide positive messages about beef until their nutritional misperceptions are resolved.

A mini Web site designed to reach girls directly with "Cool To Be Real" messages was also launched Dec. 2. The www.cool-2b-real.com Web site features important beef information in a format that appeals to tween girls. The internet is widely used by tween girls to obtain information, and this site allows producers to talk to them.

Other elements of the Cool To Be Real campaign will be unveiled in the coming months, including an essay contest asking girls what it means to be "real."

"Reaching young girls this age with accurate information about beef is incredibly important," says Sharp.

"This new program should expand our youth education efforts, and build on our work to spread the message of beef's role in healthful diets."

Llangollen Farms, Middleburg, Va., received the 2002 Angus Journal's Land Stewardship Award during the Annual Banquet of the American Angus Association, Nov. 18 in Louisville, Ky. Pictured is John Wilkins and Stephanie Wilkins, Middleburg, Va.

Bulls A Big Part Of Martin's Life

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — To the audience who will watch the bullriding drama played out at the Farm Show rodeo, the cowboy riding the bulls will be the center of their attention. To Dave Martin, however, the bulls themselves are the stars of the show.

Martin, a stock contractor for more than 30 years, will supply bulls for the High School Rodeo, Saturday, Jan. 18 at 7 p.m.

The Farm Show will also host a rodeo Friday evening Jan. 17 at 7 p.m.

He has supplied the High School Rodeo's bulls for at least 10 years, and produced rodeos in the Farm Show arena several times since 1975.

For the participants' protection, Martin takes younger bulls, 1½ to 3½ years old and weighing 1,100 to 1,400 pounds.

He plans to take the 24 bulls for each of the 24 bullriders the morning of the rodeo, and return them to the farm after the rodeo.

In the days preceding the event, "we set up the chutes and the pens behind the chutes and try to get everything cleaned up" besides having a prerodeo roundup.

"We catch the stock about 10 days before the rodeo," he said. "We bring them in and pen them up, because they can be elusive."

He wants to keep them close by so there are no surprises or last-minute chases through the pastures.

Bucking bull "Calico Joe" with companions at Dave Martin's Bullride Mania farm, Gettysburg.

Room To Move Around

Four farms known as Gettysburg Land and Cattle Company together make up 600 acres of owned and 50 acres rented land.

"These animals need room to move around," said Martin.

The animals he is referring to are the 90 bulls, 30-40 bucking horses, and 4-5 riding horses that make their home on the operation.

During the winter, employees find other jobs, but in the summer months five to ten people help Martin drive truck, feed stock, and set up and tear down for the rodeos. During a show, 30 people may be involved which includes judges, timers, secretaries, clowns, and bullfighters.

Martin's fiance Carol Hoffman also helps at the operation year-round.

The bulls may be bought or farm-raised on Martin's operation.

He was fortunate to be able to purchase "Johnny Rotten," a bull of one of the most famous bucking bull bloodlines. The "Plummer" bloodline was named after breeder Charlie Plummer, Sayre, Okla., who spent 40 years breeding bucking bulls.

Cattle of the Plummer line are usually white with black ears and Dalamation-like spots. Plummers are a fine-boned, smaller animal, with the males weighting about 1,350 pounds.

Good bucking bulls usually have Brahma and Longhorn blood, a "mainstay" in bucking bull breeding, said Martin.

"A purebred brahman usually doesn't buck very well, but if you get a good one, it's really good," he said. "They need a little extra care, they not really suited to cold winters, so most of our bulls are a quarter to half Brahma."

Some of the best crosses include Brangus (⅜ Brahman and ⅝ Angus) which are black, slick-haired, have floppy ears, and, as rule, do not have any horns. These cattle are called "muley," or "slick-headed."

Another preferred crossbred is the Braford, (⅜ Brahma and ⅝ Hereford) cattle, which "usually come out red with a white face with black stripes — what we call brindle," he said.

Martin also has Simbrahs, or Simmental and Brahma crossbreds.

The breeding program happened a bit by accident.

"I started in the '70s with a farmer in East Berlin (a nearby town), who was boarding a few bulls.

"Some of his cows got bred by accident, but it actually worked out because we got some really good results, so we thought this might be a good idea," he said.

"Now I put one good bull in with a farmer's cows, then we buy the bull calves when they're six months to a year old."

One of the area farmers has also kept some of the heifer calves and raised them. "Now he has some cows that have some bucking bloodline and bucking background, and with that we have about an 80 percent success rate. If I buy 10 calves off them, eight of them will buck right away and the other two will buck if you work with them," said Martin.

Training

A bull's training includes their first experience with a rider when they are one year old. "We put on a dummy and buck them when they're a year old. We let the dummy ride them for six seconds, then hit a button on a remote, and it has a quick release.

"We start our bulls usually at around 2½ years old," Martin said, however "a lot of rodeo contractors don't start them until they are at least four years old.

"They can't be used too much because you can take the edge off them. Too much can ruin them that they won't buck, they'll just come out and walk around.

"Once in a while you'll get one that will lay down in the chute when a guy gets on him, but a lot of times maturity will cure that."

Besides letting the animals gain maturity, Martin knows a few other training techniques.

"There are two different kinds of bucking chutes — some left-hand and some right-hand delivery. Some animals buck a lot better out of one way, so I try them both ways," he said.

"Another thing is when they go straight — which is easy to ride — we buck them in a smaller arena, and get them to where they turn back in a spin, then just gradually make the arena bigger. The bulls that spin are usually the hardest to ride because the centrifugal force is what throws the guys off."

When Martin's bulls are 2½ to three years old, he'll take them to one or two rodeos a month. Later they will head out to rodeos almost every weekend, "but now I keep a lot of bulls, so they usually go about every other weekend," Martin said.

"We usually take bulls to a lot of county fairs in Pennsylvania and six surrounding states, which is probably 80 percent of our business," he said.

Besides producing rodeos, Martin's company also produces "Bullride Mania," an event that is "predominantly bullriding, not traditional rodeo events such as steer wrestling or calf roping," he said.

Rodeo bulls, estimates Martin, "cost me about $1500 apiece by the time they are 2½ years old."

However "when you get a good one, you can sell that bull for anywhere from $15,000 to $20,000.

"The bulls that we raise usually sell in the $2,500-$3,500 range when they are three and four years old," he said.

The bulls are sold to other rodeo companies, the lesser-bucking bulls to companies that need bulls for practice sessions.

Martin sells bulls "anywhere from a practice pen to PBR, the pro bullriders show on TV." Martin sold "Barracuda" and "Jack the Ripper" to the televised PBR circuit.

In addition, "we're working on a deal now that we're sending bulls to Europe," said Martin. The 30 bulls will not only work at a large carnival, but also provide entertainment as part of a tour for overseas American servicemen and women.

Martin is concerned about "the fad with people raising bucking bulls as a hobby and for profit. My concern is if they flood the market, such has happened in the past with the ostrich and American bison market, to where an average bull won't be worth as much as they are now."

On the farm, the bulls are kept in groups, from "really young (1-1½ years old) to young, more mature bulls, and seven years or older bulls.

The older bulls may check in at 1,600 pounds to one ton.

"They're really territorial animals. Every time we mix them they fight, but after they spend a couple of days fighting, they get along.

"However "they will tear fence down if there is not enough room," said Martin.

Beginnings

When he was four years old, Martin's parents took him to see a rodeo at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, which began a lifelong passion.

When he was sixteen, Dave began a 10-year career as a rodeo contestant, competing in bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, and steer wrestling, as well as his favorite event, bullriding.

In 1971, Martin started a business of leasing bulls to rodeos on the eastern seaboard. This business expanded until Dave finally produced his first sanctioned rodeo in 1975, in Hanover.

This year, Dave Martin's Championship Rodeos produced more than 50 rodeos plus a dozen or more Bullride Manias in six different states.

Martin is joined by his son Casey in Gettysburg.

Casey competes in rodeo as a steer wrestler and attends the Savannah, Ga., College of Arts and Design. Martin's late son Jesse was ranked among the top 20 bull riders in the nation during his senior year of high school.

When not on the rodeo road, Dave works as a car auctioneer in several northeastern states.

Dave hopes to build a comprehensive indoor and outdoor facility dedicated to the conservation, breeding, and study of rodeo livestock, specializing in bucking bulls, and also a training ground for 4-H, FFA, and high school rodeo youth from the northeastern U.S.

Calves from bucking breed stock were born recently on Martin's farm.

exhibit either a Hampshire or a Yorkshire-Hampshire cross.

"For the Farm Show, you can tag two pigs and decide at the last minute which one you're going to show," she said.

How did she get interested in showing at the Farm Show?

"My Dad got me into it," said Meredith, whose father is the Bradford County dairy agent with Penn State Cooperative Extension. "He's a strong influence."

"Glen's son, John, has taken pigs to the Farm Show for years," said Gary. "We thought that pigs were a good project. We're dairy people, but we said we'd try it for a year. Pigs are so much smarter than cows. That got us hooked."

Juggling all her responsibilities is probably the most difficult part of having animal projects for Meredith.

"I'm supposed to walk them every day and I go out once in a while and play with them. This gives them more muscle and gets them used to people. They're also easier to handle in the ring," she said.

The hogs are kept in a shed on the farm that is also home to a few milking Jerseys and Holsteins. Self-feeders and waterers reduce the labor, but there's still plenty of work to do.

Meredith Hennip, center, shows off her champion pig banner from this year's Troy Fair. This week, she will exhibit a hog at the Pennsylvania Farm Show for the first time. Lloyd Ebersole, right, was the first to suggest that Meredith start taking hogs as a 4-H project. Lloyd's nephew, John Ebersole, left, also shows hogs at local fairs and the Farm Show.

"The cleaning up part's not the greatest," she said.

Even with the unsavory tasks considered, Meredith would still encourage others to show hogs.

"It's a lot of fun," she said. "The best thing is the money. I usually put it in the bank."

Besides working with hogs, Meredith participates in dairy judging, handles dairy and craft projects as a member of the Udder Bunch 4-H Club, and attends Sunday School at the North Orwell United Methodist Church.

She also plays basketball, runs cross-country, and plays the clarinet in the school band. However, she'll take a few days away from her active school schedule to travel to Harrisburg.

"I'll miss a few days of school," said Meredith, "Two at the most. I'm looking forward to that, in a way!"

Gary and his wife, Marianne, are happy that their girls have taken advantage of the opportunities in 4-H and hope they continue with the program. Another daughter, Leanne, is very involved with sports.

"I think 4-H is a great activity for learning how to work with animals and to be kind to animals," Gary said. "I also see them working with other kids, learning cooperation among kids. They all enjoy each other's company even though they're competing. It's not cutthroat competition. 4-H teaches them how to work together and how to be responsible for taking care of something. And it's about following through.

"Our philosophy has been with our kids that we don't really care what they get involved with for activities, as long as they are positive and the kids stay very active in something. So far it has worked OK."

Penn State College Of Ag Sciences Gears Up For Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The 2003 version of the Pennsylvania Farm Show will be bigger and better than ever — expanded from six to eight days and taking place in the newly renovated and greatly expanded complex — and Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences will take advantage of the broader stage to show off what it has to offer students.

As usual, the college will play a big role in the annual showcase of the state's number-one industry — agriculture — Jan. 11-18. Visitors will see evidence of Penn State's involvement in virtually every area of the sprawling complex. Throughout the Farm Show, more than 100 Penn State faculty and extension educators will assist with livestock and commodity judging for everything from dairy cattle to maple syrup to mushrooms. Their duties include weighing in animals, handling entry registration and answering questions from the public.

The college's exhibit and the horticulture department's display — side by side in a new location in the Main Exhibit Hall — have been revamped. The college booth is focused on recruiting students by showing the diverse curricula available. The horticulture display will include an "Ask the Experts" forum where visitors can get their home and garden questions answered by horticulture specialists, master gardeners and extension agents.

The Penn State 4-H display in the Family Living Complex will tell the story of what it is like to be a 4-H member. Current 4-H members will be there to talk to youths about joining the organization and 4-H alumni are encouraged to stop by, say hello and sign up to receive a newsletter.

At the college's exhibit, the public can learn about a variety of programs and talk to faculty and current students about their academic experiences. The College of Agricultural Sciences has the largest scholarship program at the university, and staff will be on hand to talk with prospective students about admission to Penn State, financial aid and scholarships, changing location to main campus and any other questions about student life at Penn State.

Also featured will be the Penn State Pullers, ¼-scale competition tractors designed and built by agricultural engineering students, hands-on activity tables with interactive experiments and games involving everything from wildlife, to animal sciences, to food science, to horticulture and crops and soils. The public is encouraged to take a few minutes to relax and watch the continuously playing videos about international study opportunities offered by the college and about Ag Progress Days, one of the largest outdoor agricultural shows in the East.

Information about all majors will be available, and visitors will have opportunities to talk one-on-one to college officials and ask questions about financial aid, academic programs and cooperative extension.

For more information, visit the Web at http://www.agriculture.state.pa.us/ and click on the Farm Show 2003 link.

Holden To Be Keynote Speaker At PennAg Democrats Breakfast

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The PennAg Democrats, Pennsylvania's Democratic Farming Organization, announced that Congressman Tim Holden will be the keynote speaker for its 2003 Annual Fundraising Breakfast, at the Farm Show Complex Monday, Jan. 13, at 8:30 a.m. in Meeting Room B.

"Congressman Tim Holden (Pennsylvania's only Congressman on the House Agriculture Committee) will be giving us an update on the key agriculture issues before Congress. We have asked the Congressman to update us on Farm Bill implementation and areas where he needs our input and support," stated Doug Kilgore, PennAg Democrats president.

Congressman Holden reinforced the benefit of such forums for obtaining feedback on what agricultural programs are working for producers and which need to be improved or changed. Congressman Holden said "Farm Show offers the best opportunity to interact with the largest number of farmers in one place outside of a Farm Bureau Convention."

Congressman Holden "likes to meet with farmers and rural residents in order to get a true understanding of how programs are being implemented at the county level," according to spokesperson Trish Reilly-Hudock.

"Besides, Farm Show has great food and excellent exhibits and animals," said Reilly-Hudock. "The Congressman is looking forward to touring this year's show in the newly expanded facility."

The annual breakfast serves as the organization's primary fundraiser. Individual attendees pay $25 each. For more information and to reserve a seat, contact Doug Kilgore, PennAg Democrats president, at (717) 862-3117 or kilmcfarm@supernetcom. All payments are to be made at the door by cash or check.

Passing On The Farm Workshop Jan. 22

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Planning for your successor, or someone to take over your farm, is the most important task you need to complete if you want your farm to survive into the next generation.

Yet, according to some recent statistics, many farm families have not identified a successor for their family business or even talked to family members about what will happen to the farm when they die.

To assist you in this process, Pennsylvania Farm Link and Penn State Extension will conduct a Passing on the Farm Workshop at the Sunset West Restaurant in Pleasant Gap Jan. 22 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Farmers seeking ideas for successfully passing their farm to family members, or those interested in locating interested, unrelated farmers to take over an operation, should attend. Beginning farmers are also urged to participate to glean ideas for building their businesses.

Topics covered will include bringing the next generation into the farm business, business planning for a farm transfer, financing for new farmers, crop insurance, estate planning and legal implications, and farmland preservation.

The workshop will conclude with a panel of local farmers discussing how they transferred their own farms.

Lunch at a cost of $7.50 will be served in the restaurant. Reservations are required by Jan. 17. Contact Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 to register. Sunset West Restaurant is located 13 miles east of State College on Rt. 26 in Pleasant Gap.

Lancaster Farming Staff

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — A diverse group of people, from seasoned farmers to those with no background in agriculture, have begun gathering for the second annual "Tilling the Soil of Opportunity" course in small business management.

The class that kicked off in Gettysburg this week included several fruit growers, an ag chemical distributor, an organic produce farmer, and an air traffic controller who plans to become a dairyman.

The 12-week course is being offered by Penn State Cooperative Extension in Adams, Berks, and Lancaster counties, with the goal of teaching small business managers how to develop a plan for a success.

Extension leaders Lynn Kime, Adams County, and Winifred McGee, Lebanon County, are teaching the Gettysburg class. The first session featured two guests who were students in last year's course and have since been applying what they've learned to the world of farming and marketing.

Tonya White of Knouse Fruitlands, Arendstville, said the reason she took the class was because she needed to learn more about running a business.

"Business is not my background," she said. "I didn't know how to look at a financial statement, (although) I was smart enough to know that our assets were supposed to be greater than our liabilities."

Creditors need to know that business owners have a sound plan before they lend money to an operation, according to White.

"Banks want to know that you're a good risk," she said. "If you fall through, they really don't want to be bothered selling a farm."

Beverly Benner of Donaldson Fruit Farm, Gettysburg, said one of the key points she learned is that successful managers do not shy away from looking at the weaknesses in their business in order to improve them.

'While it's not fun to look at what you're not doing well," she said, "that's what you need to look at."

When she and her siblings were younger, Benner said the business was going well and the family was "living to farm." But as time went on and family members went different ways, this turned into a situation in which they were "farming to live," she said.

Tonya White of Knouse Fruitlands, Adams County, tells new students some of the things she learned in last year's Tilling the Soil of Opportunity class.

One reason for developing a good business strategy is to make it possible to have a lifestyle in which the family can live to farm instead of the other way around, according to Benner.

Developing a budget for the fruit market operation over the past two years was a good step one that requires a lot of attention, Benner said. She recommended checking it once a month, if possible, and four times a year at minimum.

"We've learned that if you look at (the budget) at least quarterly, you can find out where you're going off track," she said.

In addition to working on the problem areas in the business, Benner said family farmer/marketers must be open to new ideas and willing to implement them.

"We have the tendency in our business to bury our heads," she said. "You can't do that."

Kime and McGee outlined some of the characteristic of entrepreneurs in contrast to people who are merely business owners.

"A business owner is someone who calls me up and says 'I want to be a business owner' — what kind of business should I start?'" McGee said.

Entrepreneurs, on the other hand, usually start businesses that involve something they love to do. They tend to be motivated by a passion for the work, seek self-reliance, and want to create something new. For entrepreneurs, the lines between work and play become blurry, McGee said. Their business is more than just a means of making money.

A drawback to running a business is that entrepreneurs tend to work long hours, risking failure and family strain. They often need to risk substantial amounts of their own money, too, with banks typically looking for 30 to 40 percent of the finances to come from the owner, McGee said.

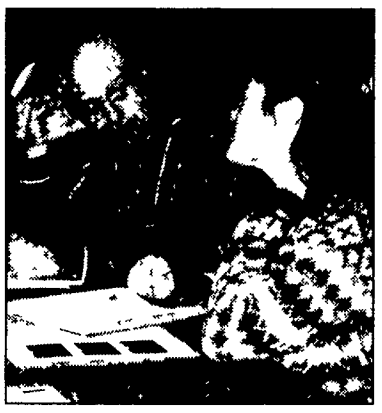
McGee used the example of Milton Hershey, the late chocolate magnate, to illustrate how the most successful entrepreneurs tend to persist when faced with setbacks. Hershey experienced bankruptcy several times before launching his chocolate operation.

"Milton Hershey had several other businesses before the (chocolate factory) got off the ground," she said. "And look where it is today."

Lynn Kime outlined some of the myths that have traditionally been associated with entrepreneurship. These include:

- Entrepreneurs are born, not made. Not so, Kime said. Entrepreneurial skills can be learned by almost anyone.
- Entrepreneurs are their own bosses. They actually work for many people, including investors, bankers, customers, employees, and family members.
- Entrepreneurs set their own hours. In fact, they work long and hard for their success.
- Entrepreneurs love high-risk ventures. Actually, successful ones do everything they can to minimize risk.
- Entrepreneurs are all young "techies" working in the Silicon Valley in California. No, entrepreneurship is not governed by age, sex, geography, or any particular type of industry.

"Small businesses are supplying over 50 percent of the jobs in the U.S. today," McGee told the group. "Small business owners run the capital system."



Chris Waesche, left, organic farmer from West Virginia, and Sabrena DeKowski, veterinary technician, Gettysburg, share their backgrounds and future plans during the Tilling the Soil of Opportunity course in Gettysburg.

Pennsylvania Holstein Convention: 'Star Gazing in Bethlehem'

BETHLEHEM (Lehiogh Co.) — Pennsylvania Holstein breeders will gather Feb. 19-21 for their annual convention at the Holiday Inn in Bethlehem.

Doug Seipt, Easton, Northampton County and Ray Seidel, Kutztown, Berks County are co-chairmen for this convention, "Star Gazing in Bethlehem."

The Southeast District planning committees have designed a fun and educational three days for Pennsylvania Holstein enthusiasts.

The convention kicks off Wednesday, Feb. 19, with the board of directors meeting and tours to Plushanski Farms; Junge Farms, Inc.; Dunn's Pride Holsteins, and Yuengling Brewery. These tours are designed not only to increase camaraderie among participants and to witness various sights in the area, but to also see the different management styles of dairies throughout the district.

The convention banquet will take place later that evening, including presentation of the Hall of Fame and Distinguished Young Holstein Breeder awards.

"Tina and Lena," from Minnesota, will provide entertainment for the evening. This duo combines a rich blend of music, humor, and high-energy fun. The comedy-singing team began in 1984 from life-long interests in the performing arts.

As part of their busy performance schedule, "Tina and Lena" have performed three times at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis. At the Pennsylvania Holstein convention, they will serve up jokes plus guitar pickin', banjo strummin', piano playin' entertainment. Their show will be customized for the Pennsylvania Holstein community.

The Pennsylvania Holstein 90th Annual Meeting is set for Thursday, Feb. 20-21.

The ladies of the Pennsylvania Holstein industry will begin their program at the Hotel Bethlehem with the "official welcome." The speaker will be Dr. Leo Frangipane, originally from Reading. "Focusing on the Right Stuff" is the title of his presentation. Frangipane has been a practicing surgeon for nearly a quarter of a century, sharing his life with patients who face disease, tough decisions, fear, anger, and even death. He speaks nationally and internationally on wellness issues, and is a consultant to healthcare organizations across the U.S.

A carefully prepared lunch will be enjoyed in the beautiful hotel. The group will then tour the Moravian Museum, a National Historic Landmark, will have time in the afternoon to visit the antique and gift shops in downtown Bethlehem.

This year's Holstein Convention Sale is set for 7 p.m., Feb. 20, after the pre-sale hot buffet. The sale cattle will be available for previewing at Dean and Dale Smith's Farm starting the day before the sale. If you are interested in consigning, please contact David Lentz at (717) 329-9202.

The ever-popular dairy bar and commercial exhibit displays will be open to convention participants on Wednesday and Thursday. If you are interested in contributing to the Holstein Convention, and would like to have your company represented in the commercial exhibits contact Connie Troutman, (610) 926-3075, or Lolly Lesher, (610) 488-9160.

The Awards Breakfast and program will take place Friday, Feb. 21 as a finale to the convention. The program speaker is Tim Abbott of ABS, Global. He will be speaking on his five-year battle with lymphoma cancer and how he maintains a positive outlook on life. A fun auction will mark the end of the convention, benefiting the Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association. Items such as quilts, paintings, and other crafts will be auctioned.

General questions about the convention can be directed to Doug Seipt, (610) 253-9918, Ray Seidel, (610) 683-6223, or Ken Raney at the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

Agriculture Department's Weights And Measures Division Completes Record Number Of Inspections

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that the department's Division of Weights and Measures completed a record-breaking 38,267 inspections in 2002.

"We want to make sure that, in Pennsylvania, you get what you pay for," Hayes said. "The Agriculture Department's Weights and Measures Division is vigilant in its efforts to protect both buyer and seller. Our record-breaking number of inspections in 2002 is evidence of that."

Last year's mark of 38,267 inspections is an increase of nearly 9,000 from 2001. Total inspections in 2001 numbered 29,328.

In addition to scales and gas pumps, many other types of devices are tested by Weights and Measures officials. Such devices include meters used to measure home fuel-oil deliveries, milk meters, home propane deliveries, wire-and-cordage-measuring devices, highway truck scales, and fabric-measuring instruments.

Pa. FFA 2003 Limited Edition Tractor To Be Auctioned

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the first time, the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation is going to auction off the first in production tractor from the 10th in the foundation's Limited Edition series.

A 2002 John Deere 4450 will be sold at the state Farm Show on Jan. 14 during the 4-H and FFA Junior Livestock Champions Auction.

This tractor is the fifth John Deere in the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation Series and the last John Deere Tractor the state FFA Foundation Board is offering. The box of the tractor includes line drawings of all the previous John Deere models.

The tractor's highest bidder will receive a letter of authenticity framed for display, a champion banner, and all the media publicity that goes along with being a top bidder at the Pennsylvania Farm Show. A display case will be included to protect this valuable investment.

Production of these tractors was made possible through Tractor Supply Company's first-ever support of Pennsylvania FFA at a state level. The tractor supply logo is on the box.

The Pennsylvania FFA Foundation began their Limited Edition tractor series in 1992. The four of the first five tractors were Farmall models with the fifth being an International. The John Deere Series began in 1998 with the production of the John Deere B replica model. While many of the earlier models are sold out, limited quantities of the remaining tractors will be on sale at the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation booth, near the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture display in the original main exhibition hall of the Farm Show Complex.

The purchase of this and all Limited Edition tractors will help support more than 8,000 FFA members of Pennsylvania. The mission of the Pennsylvania FFA is to financially support the FFA members to attend career and professional development events, compete in national and regional career development competitions, and other leadership development activities. The FFA Foundation provides more than 30 percent of the financial needs of the Pennsylvania FFA at the state level.

For more information about how you can help support Pennsylvania's future for agriculture and the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation, contact Kerry Richards at (814) 800-0013.

State Treasury Staff Members To Maintain Booths At Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Treasurer Barbara Hafer has announced representatives from treasury will be at the 87th Annual Pennsylvania State Farm Show, returning cash and other assets to attendees and assisting farmers with information regarding liquid fuels tax returns and low interest loans.

Representatives from the Unclaimed Property Bureau will be at Booth 5153 in the main exhibit hall from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Jan. 11 through Jan. 18. The staff will be equipped with laptop computers to determine if visitors have unclaimed property. A notary will be available to expedite the claims process. Staff at the booth also will have information on AgriLink, the state's low interest loan program to help farmers prevent pollution from animal wastes. Additionally, brochures on other treasury programs will be available.

Representatives of Treasury's Board of Finance and Revenue will be at the adjacent Booth 5152 in the main exhibit hall from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Jan. 11 through Jan. 18. They will be available to answer questions about liquid fuels tax returns for farmers. The Board issues refunds for taxes paid on fuels used for commercial agricultural purposes. These refunds are authorized under a state law that allows reimbursement of the state tax paid by farmers for gas, diesel and other fuels. Farmers not registered with the board may do so at the Farm Show booth. Each year the Board processes thousands of claims and returns millions of dollars to Pennsylvania farmers.

"Whether it's returning unclaimed property to the rightful owners or aiding Pennsylvania farmers," Hafer said, "attending events like the Farm Show help us find people who wouldn't typically find us."

"Anyone who wants to find out if they have unclaimed property can visit our Website, www.patreasury.org, and check the entire on-line database," Hafer said. "We estimate one in 14 Pennsylvanians is entitled to unclaimed property, and the average claim is $1,000; so it's well worth checking."

Treasury's on-line database includes more than one million unclaimed property accounts ranging in value up to hundreds of thousands of dollars. There is a total of more than $669 million on Treasury's unclaimed property books. Persons without Internet access can request a search by calling 1-800-222-2046.

Hafer said the Treasury is returning record amounts of unclaimed property — as much as $2 million a month — but said Treasury receives far more, about $6 million a month.

The property comes from businesses and organizations that, under Pennsylvania's unclaimed property law, must turn over to the state assets abandoned for five years. Included are dormant bank accounts, stocks and dividends, uncashed payroll or accounts payable checks, uncollected utility deposits and unredeemed gift certificates.

Milk Marketing Board Announces December Class I Price

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Milk Marketing Board (MMB) announced the prices to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for December Class I milk (beverage) as an average of $14.57 in the western areas of the commonwealth, and an average of $15.06 in the central and eastern areas of the commonwealth.

These prices do include the over-order premium of $1.65 per one hundred pounds of milk.

Farmers, whose milk production is pooled under a federal order, will receive a marketwide blend price based upon the value of all classes of milk. However, the blend price received will vary as the component composition of a farmer's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

Franklin County Dairy Day Focuses On Dry Cow Program

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

KAUFFMAN (Franklin Co.) — Balanced dry cow nutrition is an important part of making sure the animals get a good milking start.

But feed is only part of the picture — a smaller part than is often believed, according to Gabriella Varga of Penn's State's dairy and animal science department. She spoke on the topic of dry cow management at the annual Franklin County Dairy Day at Kauffman Jan. 3.

"We are quick to blame nutrition (for early-lactation problems)," she said. "But there are many other things involved."

According to Varga, proper transition feeding amounts to about 25 percent of the challenge of getting cows off to a healthy, productive lacatation. Overall management, such as cow comfort, can play an even bigger role — about 50 percent, with the animals' genetic makeup rounding out the equation at about 25 percent.

Ketosis, displaced abomasum, retained placenta, milk fever, and metritis are some of the problems that a good transition program helps to prevent. These ailments can have a big impact on veterinary bills — and the milk check.

"When a cow gets sick, she eats about 5 pounds less feed per and makes about 20 pounds less milk per day," Varga said.

Varga divided transition cow management into four phases: prior to dryoff, far-off dry period, close-up dry period, and post-fresh period.

Dairy managers should begin monitoring cows for body condition in the six-week period prior to drying off, Vargas said. Health risks to over-fat cows have been known for many decades, she pointed out. Cows that grow too fat as they drop off in production and enter the dry period can be at a greater risk for metabolic problems after calving. During the dry period, producers may benefit by feeding fat cows separately from those with lower body condition scores.

Providing plenty of space is crucial for good dry cow management, Varga said. She noted that many producers tend to focus on milking facilities at the expense of the dry cows.

"Build your dry cow stallbarn first," she said. "You got to make these girls comfortable. You do not want to overcrowd them."

Is it necessary to provide a "far-off" dry cow ration, and then switch to another, more nutritious "close-up" ration in the month before calving? Or is it best to keep the dry cows in one group?

"There are advantages and disadvantages for both," Varga said. It always depends on the availability of factors such as labor, facilities, and forage.

Among the advantages of splitting dry cows into two groups is that the far-off group can be fed cheaper rations that require less time to feed — such as free-choice hay in round bales. Also, if better quality forage is in limited supply, it should be saved for the close-up group.

On the other hand, having just one dry cow group eliminates splitting up and moving cows and can simplify the work of feeding. And, when the dry cows are all fed a relatively good ration throughout the period, managers can be more assured that the cows will adapt to milking rations after calving.

Gabriella Varga, Penn State dairy and animal science department, suggests that overall management and cow comfort are even bigger factors than nutrition in a good dry cow program.

If the cows are kept in one group, however, they may need to be monitored more closely to make sure "bully cows" are not crowding out less aggressive animals.

Varga said that producers may want to consider increasing protein and energy amounts above currently recommended levels for close-up rations. This could help meet the needs of the fetus and acclimate the cow's digestive system to production after calving. However, boosting protein and energy levels should be done with caution.

"Why not just feed 16 percent crude protein? Protein is a gross measure — the type is important," she said. Feeding too much unusable protein will just result in it passing through the animal, or can even cause ammonia toxicity.

Dry cows tend to decrease their dry matter intake as they approach calving. Adding more energy to the close-up ration helps boost dry matter intake and increases insulin production, which assists fatty acid metabolism, Varga said. While many studies have shown this, they have been inconclusive about how adding more energy to close-up rations affects production.

"The bottom line," she said, "is the majority of these studies didn't see any response in milk production."

Varga added that the studies have not yet supplied enough information on factors such as the possible affect on metabolic disorders. Research is still in progress.

Above all, Vargas said, dairy managers need to provide dry cows with good, balanced rations and make sure the cows are comfortable.

"You can feed a whole gamut of dry cow rations and the animals will do fine," she said.

Also speaking at the Dairy Day were Ken Bailey, Penn State dairy economist, and Richard Stup of Penn State's Dairy Alliance.

Bailey outlined the futures market and the principles of forward contracting. Stup led a discussion on the importance of good communication within dairy family businesses.

More reports from the Frankin County Dairy Day are scheduled for the Feb. 15 issue of Lancaster Farming's Dairy Plus.

Franklin County dairymen, from left, Dale Martin, Harold Crider, and Jay Grove share their experiences as members of family-operated farms. The discussion was initiated by Richard Stup of Penn State's Dairy Alliance. He spoke about the need for family farm members to practice good communication skills.

Norman & Linda Miller

Our past experience with Penn Jersey and the quality of the equipment they have was one of the reasons we purchased a Slurrystore from them. Another reason was the center agitation system and the side mounted pump they offer. We saw an in-ground concrete tank that's three years old and about the same size as ours and it has a lot of build up in the bottom. We didn't want any part of that! We also liked the expandability of the Slurrystore.

Learn To Cook From The Experts

Farm Show Kitchen Stage Features Celebrity Cooks, Authors

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Learn to cook at the Farm Show.

OK. Maybe you know how to cook basic stuff, family favorites, a recipe your friend gave you....

But do you know how to create gourmet dishes served in upscale restaurants?

Are you intimidated by unfamiliar terminology such as olive emulsion, chiffonade of basil, and by exotic ingredients?

Celebrity chefs and cookbook authors will demonstrate favorite recipes and answer many questions during scheduled events at Farm Show's new Pennsylvania Kitchen Stage.

Bill Scepansky, corporate chef with Kegel's Produce, Lancaster, is one of 20 chefs who will demonstrate cooking techniques at the Pennsylvania Farm Show's Kitchen Stage.

Scepansky has an easygoing, likable style who calms the apprehension of novice cooks tackling new recipes and methods. He offers tips on handling mushrooms and other fresh produce as he demonstrates.

"Keep them as dry as possible. If you put mushrooms under water, they absorb the liquid, causing them to stew instead of saute," he said.

Scepansky is a corporate chef for Kegel's Produce, Lancaster, which processes and delivers produce within a 150-mile radius.

As corporate chef, Scepansky develops recipes using produce from all over the world. His specialty is fresh-cut produce. And for cooks conscious of wanting to promote healthful lifestyles and using the most nutritious, freshest ingredients, Scepansky is an expert.

He will prepare Grilled Portabella Carpaccio with Feta Cheese, Roasted Tomato Jam, and Black Olive Emulsion.

The name of that recipe is enough to scare off some cooks. But Scepansky assures participants that it is easy to prepare.

"It's much easier than making chow chow like many Pennsylvania Dutch cooks prepare," he said. "The recipe I'm making can be prepared from start to finish within 20 minutes."

He wields a chopping knife with finesse. At the workshop, he will demonstrate the proper way to cut basil and other fresh herbs.

Creative cooking with fresh produce has been honed by Scepansky's experience as a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America and as a chef for Franklin and Marshall College.

Scepansky's demonstration at the Farm Show is scheduled Wed. Jan. 15, 1 p.m. at the Culinary Connection. Visitors will have the opportunity to taste sample his specialty and those by other celebrity cooks.

Other cookbook authors and chefs include the following:

- Pam Anderson, author of "CookSmart: Perfect Recipes for Everyday."
- Fritz Blank, chef de cuisine and owner of Deux Cheminees, a classic French restaurant.
- Anne Quinn Corr, author of "Seasons of Central Pennsylvania: A Cookbook."
- Sonny D'Angelo author of "Are You Game."
- Aliza Green, author of "The Bean Bible: A Legumaniac's Guide to Lentils, Peas, and Every Edible Bean on the Planet."

GRILLED PORTABELLA CARPACCIO WITH FETA CHEESE, ROASTED TOMATO JAM AND BLACK OLIVE EMULSION

3 portabella mushroom, stem removed
6 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
1½ tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
Salt and fresh cracked pepper to taste
6 vine-ripened tomatoes, assorted colors
3 shallots, chopped
6 tablespoons herbs (basil, chives, chervil) chopped
6 kalamata olives, pitted in juice
12 slices French bread, sliced ¼-inch thick, toasted with olive oil
6 drops truffle oil
3 ounces feta cheese, crumbled

Wipe top of portabella with damp cloth to remove any debris. Drizzle one-third of oil and Worcestershire sauce on top of mushrooms and season with salt and pepper. Rub all over mushrooms. Refrigerate covered for one hour.

Cut core out of tomato and score an "X" on the bottom. Drop tomatoes into lightly salted, boiling water for one minute or as soon as skin begins to curl. Remove tomatoes and place in bowl of ice water to cool rapidly. When cool, remove tomatoes and pat dry. Peel tomatoes and cut into small wedges. Squeeze out seeds. In skillet large enough to fit tomatoes in single layer, heat second third of oil over medium heat.

Add tomato wedges and pan roast until beginning to brown. Add chopped garlic and cook additional minute. Remove from heat and allow to cool. Fold in chopped shallots and chiffonade of basil. Season with salt and pepper. Refrigerate until one hour before serving.

In mortar and pestal, grind together remaining olive oil, olives, truffle oil, remaining Worcestershire sauce and a touch of olive juice to create a thick, emulsified, dressing like consistency.

One half hour before serving, grill mushrooms on both sides until well marked but still firm. Place mushrooms on plate and cover with foil to allow to carryover and cook just until tender.

Pour any accumulated juices to olive mix.

To serve, place one slice of toasted French bread just off center on plate. With a very sharp knife, slice portabellas as thinly as possible. Fan one quarter of mushroom per serving off of bread slice. Top bread with large spoonful of tomato jam. Sprinkle mushroom slices with feta cheese and top tomato jam with assorted small, delicate herbs, and drizzle plate with olive emulsion.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Almost the middle of January and I'm still thinking of Christmas. We had our open house and about 50 of our relatives attended. All of our children except one came. Our youngest daughter lives in Maine, and she had been here for Thanksgiving. There were 10 of us living here for a few days, and it was surely quiet after they left for Georgia.

They left so many gifts behind. There were handmade items and store-bought items ranging from sweaters and pillows to tablecloths and slippers. We were also given food and candy. It takes time to decorate a house for Christmas and now I must put away the ornaments for another year.

The snow was a real treat for the grandchildren from the South. Seven of the boys and girls worked on making two big snowmen. So, we'll be able to enjoy them for a while. One child got a telescope for Christmas and used it one night to find the planets. Some of their gifts were very complicated like the tiny camera that took pictures and then showed them on a screen in the camera. They could even print them on a computer at their home.

Recently, I visited the Ten Thousand Villages, a store near Ephrata, and was amazed at the variety of products sold to help the poor people of Africa, India and other countries. The store has everything from large Oriental rugs to pieces of jewelry and toys. The materials that are used are also unusual — dried grasses and all kinds of wood and metal.

From this store, my children and I went directly to a large department store where they purchased clothes and big fluffy pillows. We used sleeping bags, cots, air mattresses and beds to sleep 10 people. We roasted a big chicken, baked a ham, and hopefully kept everyone happy.

Exciting Espresso Desserts

Caffè Espresso Adds Elegance To Entertaining

Caffè espresso creates a fabulous finale to any fine meal. If you crave the sophisticated taste of cappuccino, you will love the flavorful addition Italian-style espresso makes to exciting after-dinner drinks and desserts. The full-bodied notes of caffè espresso harmonize well with the sweet tastes of chocolate, nut, fruit and berry. Espresso lends an elegance to recipes that inspires compliments from guests and family alike.

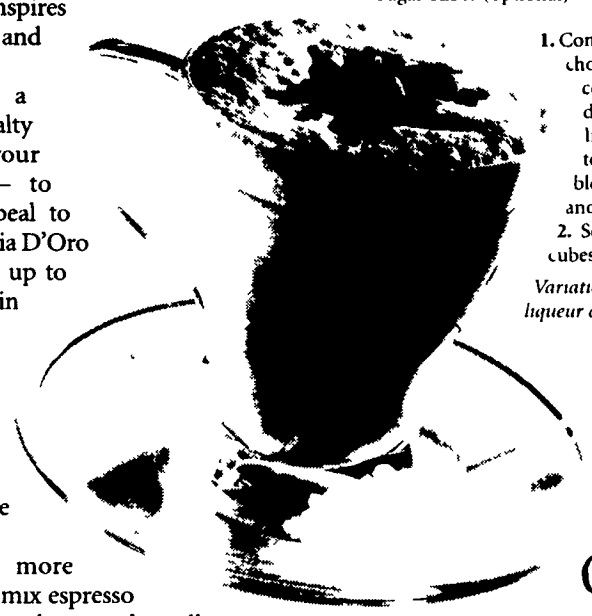
Why wait to visit a coffeehouse to enjoy specialty espresso drinks? Treat your friends – and yourself – to exciting beverages that appeal to adult tastes at home. Medaglia D'Oro Caffè Espresso really stands up to the hazelnut and chocolate in Caffè Torino, so that you experience all of the flavors – delicious. Create your own variations on the recipe (right) by trying another flavor – like almond or orange – for the syrup, liqueur and garnish.

Experiment with more complex combinations that mix espresso with two or more flavors that work well together. For instance, Medaglia D'Oro combines smooth espresso with dark rum, chocolate, and velvety cream and mascarpone cheese in its show-stopping Tiramisù Cheesecake. And, Medaglia D'Oro's out-of-this-world Maple Java Baby Bundt Cakes call for maple syrup, bourbon, walnuts and espresso. Once you experience this original use of ingredients, you'll never consider a bundt cake a "plain" dessert again.

Caffè espresso enlivens trendy desserts and beverages. And, it gives traditional recipes a novel twist. Whether enjoyed as a demitasse or in delectable desserts, Medaglia D'Oro Caffè Espresso brings an elegant end to any meal – one that will have guests talking long after the party's over.

Caffè Torino

- 2 ounces brewed Medaglia D'Oro Espresso
- 1 tablespoon sweet ground chocolate and cocoa
- 2 teaspoons hazelnut syrup
- 1 tablespoon hazelnut liqueur
- Steamed milk with foam
- Shaved semisweet chocolate (for garnish)
- Sugar cubes (optional)



1. Combine espresso with ground chocolate and cocoa in a 6-ounce coffee cup. Stir until cocoa is dissolved. Add hazelnut syrup and liqueur and enough steamed milk to almost fill the cup. Stir until blended. Mound the cup with foam and sprinkle with shaved chocolate.
2. Serve Caffè Torino with 2 sugar cubes for added sweetness, if desired.

Variation: Almond syrup and Amaretto liqueur can be substituted for hazelnut syrup and liqueur.

Makes 1 serving

Tiramisù Cheesecake

CHEESECAKE FILLING

- 3 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened
- 8 ounces mascarpone cheese
- 1 1/4 cups granulated sugar
- 4 large eggs
- 1/3 cup brewed Medaglia D'Oro Espresso, cooled
- 1 tablespoon dark rum
- 1 1/2 ounces semisweet chocolate, finely chopped

CRUST

- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1 cup shortbread cookie crumbs

TOPPING

- 1 cup heavy cream
- 3 tablespoons superfine sugar
- 1 tablespoon dark rum
- 1/2 ounce semisweet chocolate, grated

1. Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Butter 8" springform pan and wrap the outer side of the pan with heavy duty aluminum foil.
2. For Crust, combine cookie crumbs with melted butter in small bowl and stir until crumbs are evenly moistened. Transfer to prepared springform pan. Press crumbs to evenly cover bottom of pan. Bake crust for 10 minutes. Cool on wire rack.
3. To prepare Cheesecake Filling, beat cream cheese in a large bowl, using an electric mixer at medium speed, until light and fluffy. Add mascarpone and beat just until blended. Add sugar and beat until smooth. Add eggs, one at a time, then add the espresso and rum. When all of the ingredients are thoroughly blended, fold in chocolate using a rubber spatula. Pour mixture over the crust in prepared springform pan. Place pan in a larger baking pan, and add enough boiling water to come halfway up the sides of the springform pan. Bake cheesecake in oven for 1 hour and 20 minutes or just until lightly golden and set. Turn off the oven and let cheesecake rest for 30 minutes with the door slightly ajar. Transfer cheesecake to a wire rack to cool completely. Remove aluminum foil, cover with plastic wrap, and refrigerate for 3 hours or overnight.
4. To prepare Topping, beat heavy cream with sugar and rum in medium bowl, using an electric mixer at high speed, until stiff. Spread whipped cream over the top of cheesecake, then sprinkle with chocolate. Remove sides of springform pan just before serving.

Stir Coffee For More Than Beverages

DREW CAREY'S APPLE COFFEE CAKE

2 cups flour
1½ cups granulated sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup vegetable oil
2 large eggs
¼ cup coffee (liquid)
1½ teaspoon vanilla extract
1½ cups apples, peeled and sliced
1 cup chopped nuts

Grease a Bundt pan. Mix all other ingredients together in a bowl. Pour mixture into pan. Bake at 350F for one hour. Serves 10-12.

COFFEE CHILI

1 cup dried red beans
1 cup extra-strength coffee
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
½ cup chopped onion
3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 pounds top sirloin steak, cut into ½-inch cubes
1½ tablespoons chili powder
1 teaspoon dried oregano
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 can (14½ ounces) tomato puree or crushed peeled tomatoes
1 cup beef broth
Salt to taste
Sour cream for garnish
Grated Monterey Jack cheese, for garnish
Cilantro sprigs for garnish

In a mixing bowl, cover the red beans with ¾ cup coffee. Soak overnight.

In a deep casserole, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil and saute the onion and garlic over medium heat until soft, about 10 minutes. Set them to one side, add the remaining tablespoon of oil, and brown the steak cubes.

Add the remaining ¼ cup coffee, spices, and tomatoes to the casserole. Bring to a boil, stir well, and allow to simmer for 10 minutes. Add the beef broth and the drained beans to the casserole and bring to a boil over medium heat. Reduce the heat and simmer for 1 hour. Season with salt.

To serve, ladle the chili into individual bowls and top with the sour cream, grated cheese, and sprigs of cilantro. Serves 4 to 6.

COFFEE CHEESECAKE

Crumb Crust:
Butter flavor no-stick cooking spray
3 tablespoons chocolate wafer crumbs
1 tablespoon granulated sugar

Batter:
1 ounce unsweetened chocolate
2 ounces semisweet chocolate
¼ cup unsifted cake flour
1 tablespoon cornstarch
Generous pinch of baking soda
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅓ plus 1 tablespoon unsweetened baking cocoa
3 cups nonfat cottage cheese (24 oz)
1½ cups light cream cheese
1 tablespoon vanilla extract
1 tablespoon plus 1 teaspoon instant espresso or regular coffee powder
1¼ cups granulated sugar
1 large egg plus 2 large egg whites
Chocolate curls or shavings
1 bar or block semisweet chocolate
1 teaspoon confectioner's sugar

Position rack in center of oven and preheat the oven to 325 degrees F. Cut a sheet of heavy-duty aluminum foil and mold it completely around the outside of the spring foam pan; this will prevent leaking during the water bath. Remove pan from foil and set it aside.

Coat the inside of the spring foam pan with cooking spray. In a cup, blend together chocolate wafer crumbs and sugar, then dust the inside of the baking pan with this mixture. Spread excess crumbs evenly over the bottom of the pan and set aside.

Coarsely chop the chocolates and set them to melt in the top of a double broiler over low heat; remove from heat and set aside to cool.

Place a sifter over a medium sized bowl and measure into it the flour, cornstarch, baking soda, salt and cocoa. Stir/sift the ingredients into the bowl and set aside.

Place the nonfat cottage cheese in a strainer set over a bowl, cover the strainer with a piece of plastic wrap or wax paper, and press on it with your hand to force out any excess liquid. In a blender or food processor, process the cottage cheese 2 or 3 full minutes, until absolutely smooth, without any graininess. Scrape down the bowl and blade once or twice. Add the cream cheese and process until smooth.

Stir vanilla and coffee powder together in a cup, and then add it to the cheese mixture with the sugar, egg, and egg whites, and melted and cooled chocolate. Pulse to blend. Add the dry ingredients all at once and pulse only to combine; do not overwork the mixture. Pour the batter into the prepared pan. Set the pan inside the molded foil and press the foil tightly around the pan sides so no water can penetrate. Place the foil wrapped pan into the roasting pan and add hot water to reach about one third of the way up the sides of the pan. Bake for one hour until the top is dry and glossy and you can touch the surface without leaving a mark. Turn off the heat, and leave the cake inside with the door closed for another hour.

Remove the cake from the water bath and foil wrapper and cool completely on a rack in a draft free location. Refrigerate, covered with foil or plastic wrap at least 4 hours or overnight, until completely chilled.

Follow the directions to make chocolate curls or shavings and pile them on top of cake. Sift a tiny bit of confectioner's sugar over the curls just before serving.

To make curls, use a chocolate bar or block the size that comforts your hand. Bring the chocolate to room temperature. Draw a swivel type vegetable peeler across the top of the bar letting the curls fall on the paper below. Use a toothpick to lift the fragile curls and pile on top of cake.

To make shavings, take a block or piece of chocolate and draw it across the medium size holes of a grater letting shavings fall directly on top of cake.

Featured Recipe

Coffee isn't just for drinking as you can see from the recipes that appear on B6.

Many people will be surprised by this recipe that incorporates coffee beans into a rub for roast beef. Sometimes the most unusual combinations turn out to be winners. And, according to those who tried it, this recipe from the New York Beef Industry Council is a winner. Try it, and let us know how you like it.

ESPRESSO-CRUSTED BEEF ROAST

1 beef rib-eye roast, small end, 4 to 6 pounds

Espresso Rub:
1 tablespoon ground espresso coffee beans
1 tablespoon packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon coarse grind black pepper

Balsamic Sauce:
1 cup balsamic vinegar
¼ cup butter, at room temperature
4 teaspoons all-purpose flour
1 cup ready-to-serve beef broth
¼ teaspoon coarse grind black pepper

Heat oven to 350F. Combine rub ingredients; press evenly onto beef roast. Place roast, fat side up, on rack in shallow roasting pan.

Insert ovenproof meat thermometer so tip is centered in thickest part of beef, not resting on fat. Do not add water or cover. Roast in 350F oven 1¾ to 2 hours for medium rare; 2 to 2½ hours for medium doneness.

Remove roast when meat thermometer registers 135F for medium rare; 150F for medium. Transfer roast to carving board; tent loosely with aluminum foil. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes. (Temperature will continue to rise about 10F to reach 145F for medium rare; 160F for medium.) Skim fat from drippings; reserve drippings.

Meanwhile bring vinegar to a boil in small nonreactive saucepan; cook over medium heat 20 minutes or until reduced to ¼ cup. Mix butter and flour in small bowl until smooth. Add broth, reserved drippings and pepper to pan. Gradually whisk in butter mixture until smooth; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer 1 minute, stirring constantly. Keep warm. Carve roast into thin slices. Serve with sauce.

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Prep and cook time: 2¼ to 3 hours.

Anyone know to which recipes she is referring? Please send in to be reprinted.

ANSWER — A Lancaster County reader wanted a recipe to make homemade cream cheese. Thanks to Holly Lutz, Jonestown, for sending two different recipes.

Homemade Cream Cheese

1 tablespoon sour milk or buttermilk
2 cups whipping cream

Mix 1 tablespoon sour milk or buttermilk into 2 cups whipping cream and let set at room temperature (in a warm spot) for 1-2 days, until it gets thick. Now the sour cream has to be heated to 35 C (90F) for about 30 minutes for the whey to separate from the curds. The best way to accomplish this is to heat on the stove to 50 C (115F), turn off the heat, and pour sour milk into a bowl with the cream. Make sure milk does not get too hot or it will be dry and crumbly.

After about 30-45 minutes, line a sieve with a cheesecloth (which has been rinsed with cold water and wrung out). Place the sieve on top of a bowl and carefully ladle the cream into it. The whey drips in the bowl. Now knot the ends of the cheesecloth together and hang over bowl for about 2 hours. What's left in the cloth is now cream cheese. Don't pour away the whey. It contains lots of vitamins, minerals, and some protein. It can be used instead of water for bread baking, for waffles or pancakes.

Homemade Cream Cheese

1 gallon whole milk
1 quart cultured buttermilk
½ teaspoon salt

Pour milk and buttermilk into a large pan and suspend the thermometer in the milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally until temperature reads 170 degrees.

Keep the mixture on the heat and the temperature of the milk between 170-175 degrees. After 30 minutes, the mixture should start to separate into curds (the lumps) and whey (the liquid).

Line a strainer with several layers of moistened cheesecloth and set it inside a large bowl to lift the curds from the milk mixture and lay them in the cheesecloth. Pour the remainder of the whey through the cheesecloth and save the whey for other recipes.

Let curds drain at room temperature for 2-4 hours. Remove the cheese from the cheesecloth and place in blender with the salt. Blend until creamy.

Store the cheese into small containers with tight fitting lids and refrigerate. Cheese can also be frozen, thawed, and beaten again in blender until creamy.

ANSWER Because of early deadlines for New Year's Day, the B-section was printed early resulting in many soup recipes reaching us after it was printed. But we know you love soup and this is the time of the year when you are searching for soup recipes. Here are some yummy ones from our Priscilla Engle.

Italian Sausage Soup
(Treat the Teachers)

1 teaspoon garlic powder
½ pound hot Italian sausage
1 tablespoon oregano, fresh is best
1 pound mild sweet Italian sausage
1 tablespoon basil
2 onions chopped
1 tablespoon parsley
1 green pepper chopped
Salt to taste
4 cups beef broth (I use canned if I have no stock)
Pepper to taste
1½ cup red wine (red table wine)
1 (8 ounce) box corkscrew pasta
8 ounce can tomato sauce
Parmesan cheese, grated
28 ounce can tomato puree

Remove skin from sausage, crumble and saute in a large heavy pot until brown. Drain. Add the onions and the peppers, and saute until tender, but don't let it get mushy. Add broth and red wine; and bring it to a boil. Add everything but the pasta. Cook uncovered for an hour on low. Add the pasta last with about 15 minutes to go. If it is too thick add a cup of water. Serve with the grated parmesan on top.

This feeds about six people, but I think it may only feed four hungry men. Serve garlic bread or sticks with this meal.

Chincoteague Clam Chowder
On Bayfront Lane

This one takes a while but it tastes great by the sea when you have just "key holed" a couple plus dozen hard clams.

Let your fresh clams set in a bucket of water to siphon out the sand.

You need 5 dozen clams. 3 dozen if you have found larger clams. It all adds up to 3 cups of chopped cooked clams.

Steam them (My Chincoteague neighbors really boil them in an inch of water), remove them from the pot and let them cool. Remove them from their shells. Chop the clams and remove the yellow snouts. Sit this in the refrigerator.

Save the broth and strain it through two layers of cheese cloth. This is the true taste of the true Chincoteague Chowder so they have told me.

Other ingredients:
3 cups cold water (for the steamer)
8 tablespoons butter
1 large chopped onion
3 stalks diced celery, leaves and all.
Pinch of thyme leaves if you have it in your spice patch! Dry will do.
3 tablespoons unbleached flour
3 large potatoes diced to the size of a dime
2 cans evaporated milk
2 cups half and half
2 cups broth from clam steamer
Fresh ground pepper
Salt if you want it (Chincoteague clams are salty)

In another pot, not the steamer pot, melt butter over a low heat, add the celery and onions and saute them. They should be soft and not mushy. Don't let them brown. Add the flour and stir making sort of a lumpy roux. Slowly add the reserved strained broth about 2 cups worth. Stir. Add a cup of regular water. It should be getting thicker. Add the potatoes. Reduce heat. Cook potatoes until soft. Last add the clams and the evaporated milk and half and half. Cook carefully for about 5 minutes and do not let it come to a boil. Season with pepper.

If you want it thicker, make another roux by mixing 8 more tablespoons butter and 3 tablespoons of flour in a separate pan and keep adding it until the chowder is thick enough.

Buck and Barley
(Glory View Buck) (It was a 9-pointer!)

2 quarts of water
½ cup barley, uncooked
1 onion, diced
1 cup of diced celery
1 cup of finely diced carrots
2 large cloves of garlic
1 tablespoon of parsley
2 vegetable bouillion cubes or beef if you prefer
Salt and pepper
1 pound buck — I use small stew scraps and sometimes 4 chops

If chops are used they must be removed from the pot deboned and chopped up. One pound of the buck is needed as long as it is not ground.

Put all ingredients in the pot.

Boil for 30 minutes. Check for doneness of the barley! Serve and enjoy.

Here are some favorite recipes from Linda Matyas of Chilly Creek Farm, Bloomsburg.

Linda's Country Soup

1 pound chopped beef or beef cubes, cut up small
2 medium onions, cut into pieces
6 fresh carrots, peeled, sliced
1 package frozen corn (canned vegetables if you have salt)
2 stalks celery, cut up (you can include the tops —very healthy)
1 large can V-8 juice, or use plain spaghetti sauce
¼ head green cabbage, cut up
2 tablespoons chopped garlic
1 tablespoon tarragon
2 tablespoons parsley
Salt and pepper, to taste

Brown the meat and onions in a large soup pot. Add everything else. Let it cook on low to medium for a couple of hours, until meat is tender and cabbage is tender. It may be served as is or with potatoes that have been cubed and cooked; noodles may be added also. No fat: very healthy and everyone loves it.

Linda's Cream Of Mushroom Soup

1 box fresh, sliced mushrooms (it's a time saver to buy sliced but you can slice whole ones
1 large onion, chopped
1 teaspoon nutmeg
¼ cup butter
Milk
2 tablespoons cornstarch mixed in 1 cup water, stir well to remove lumps
Salt and pepper to taste

Brown mushrooms in soup pot with butter and onion. When onion is transparent, add enough milk to cover all; add nutmeg, thicken with cornstarch mixture; add salt and pepper to taste.

Leek And Potato Soup

3 leeks, cut into slices
4 potatoes, skinned, cubed
4 cups or more chicken broth
1 tablespoon parsley
1 tablespoon garlic
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup butter

Melt butter in soup pot; brown leeks; add broth, potatoes, and herbs. Simmer until tender.

On Being a Farm Wife

Quiet. Still. Serene. Peaceful.

Picture those lovely wintry scenes we enjoy on holiday cards, calendars, picture books, magazine covers, pastoral settings draped in frosty white, yet washed with an aura of coziness. Rustic, rugged barns stand solid under roofs overhung with snow. Graceful pine boughs dip low under cottony drifts. Winter birds of cheery color gather in berry-laden, snow-dappled bushes. A golden glow shines from windows of an icicle-fringed farmhouse, wisps of smoke rising from its chimney.

Actual scenes of such wintry beauty have abounded this moisture-blessed season. But forget the quiet, serene, peaceful stillness. It's been one noisy winter.

Frequent during recent weeks has been the steady hiss of sleet and freezing rain bombarding the windows on the east side of the house. Drought-breakers they are, this parade of nor'easters that's been marching up the Atlantic coast. Such a storm stream is necessary and welcome, to break the back of our groundwater deficiency.

Following on the heels of the hiss of freezing moisture comes the sound belying the beauty of the outside. An unnerving chattering of ice-coated tree limbs reaches a clattering crescendos each time a wind blast bores through the trees.

And, we mentally steel ourselves for the dramatic sound bytes bound to follow — cracking, snapping, crashing — as limbs tumble from the treetops, to the roofs of house and porch, the split rail fence, the lawn. The first storm tossed down a large one that just barely, barely, missed the farm truck parked in front of the house during the first of — we're losing count — the wintry ice storms

Professional tree-trimming of our giant maples done a year ago kept most of the fallout to relatively small pieces. So far, those have amazingly managed to miss the glass of the greenhouse.

This symphony of storm sounds inevitably turns into another harsh racket. The screaming whine of chain saws echoes around the back yard, as the piles of tree fallout are tackled and reduced to future firewood and songbird-sheltering brushpiles.

Another familiar sound byte of the season this year has been the roaring din of a diesel tractor cranked to high output, its PTO spinning the generator during several electric outages. Predictably, three of the four were over milking hours. The generator, a wood-stove in the house, fresh batteries in flashlights and lots of candles have kept the disruptance to mostly inconvenience.

An ominous wintry sound effect marks not the storm, but the aftermath, as warm sunshine nudges at the snow cover. Swift and abrupt, a low rumble becomes a muffled whooooooosh, followed by a loud spattering sound, as the avalanche of snow cascades off our metal house roof. Our roof avalanches happen in a heartbeat; any unfortunate being caught standing below can rest assured they'll be found by spring thaw.

The roar of a big truck accompanied by a scraping sound marks the always-welcome sound of the township's salting/cindering/plowing passage. While farms are usually equipped to move snow around the buildings, and even the roads in emergencies, our township folks are prompt, efficient, and much appreciated for their dedication to our rural roads.

A happy sound echoed around our hills on a recent, bright Sunday afternoon, with temperatures just warm enough to be enjoyable and cold enough to hold the snow. Three generations of us (including the dog) piled into the pickup, laden in snow clothes and sleds of various sorts.

The Farmer piloted the four-wheeler, for hauling little folks back up the long hill that slopes away from the conservation terrace. The lower side of the long curving terrace proved to be a perfect sled launch for a long, speedy sled ride — when we didn't fly crooked on those unsteerable plastic sleds and roll off in gales of glee.

Of all the wintry-storm-related sounds, the best one is the laughter of kids playing in the snow.

Time To Get Clutter Under Control

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Getting rid of excess clutter can reduce housework by 40 percent. Fewer things to move and clean means there are fewer places for dust and its allergens to accumulate. This is important for everyone, but particularly if there's a family member who suffers from asthma.

Begin by analyzing what's in the room — one room at a time. Surface clutter is easier to deal with and will produce a quicker change, so concentrate on what you can see rather than what's stored in closets and drawers. Things that don't pass the "I use it" or "I love it" test should be eliminated.

Don't keep duplicates or items that are broken or outdated.

Group the "keepers" together by category, so you can see everything you own at a glance. This will make it easier to determine where to store these items.

Discards generally fall into one of the following categories: trash, giveaways, tag sale, or belongs somewhere else (such as in storage or another room).

Give each category its own carton so it's easy to remove items to their next destination. Giving items away to a charity may make it easier to part with them. Off-site storage for items like tax records, college memorabilia or extra furniture is another solution. If you need something, you can always go get it.

When reorganizing, store items near their point of use. Books and reading glasses go next to the reading chair. Cooking utensils go in a drawer next to the cooktop. Keep accessibility and safety in mind. Don't store anything dangerously out of reach or overstuff drawers.

Once the reorganization is complete, follow the "One In, One Out" rule — nothing new comes in unless something old goes out. Make it a point to put things away as they are used.

That way, daily clean up should take no more than five minutes per room, and dusting and vacuuming will become easier and faster.

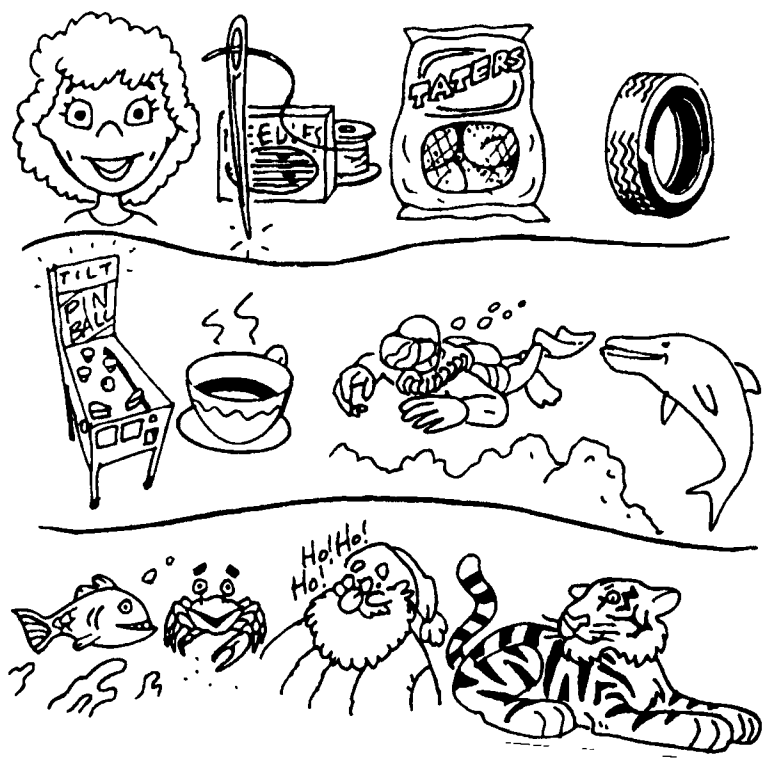
Which Thing Doesn't Belong?

In each row, there's something that doesn't quite fit. Which one is it?



Snow Without Clouds?

Dear Twig:

Can it snow when there aren't any clouds? The other day was really sunny and really cold and I saw all these tiny snowflakes in the air, wrote Suzy S., Columbus, Ohio.

Yes, it can snow when there aren't any clouds. But it's a special type of snow — whisper-light, twinkling, gently falling — called "diamond dust." It's common in the Arctic and the Antarctic.

Cool.

Diamond-dust snow, like other types of snow, is actually a whole bunch of six-sided ice crystals.

But diamond-dust crystals are small and simple, not big and fancy. Instead of looking like lacy stars — how we usually imagine snowflakes — they're shaped like teensy plates or columns.

Diamond dust forms when it's very cold and there's water vapor (water in invisible gas form) in the air near the ground. The cold makes the vapor condense — turn into a liquid or, in this case, a solid. Clouds, which are simply giant, visible masses of condensed water vapor, may or may not be present.

Other names for diamond dust are ice fog and frost mist. See it (if you can) as a jewel of winter.

Cloudlessly,
Twig

How Should We Make Icy Roads Safe?

Dear Twig:

Is ice the only way to make roads safe?

Not necessarily.

Salt is a cheap way to melt ice. It melts the first layer of ice into a salt-and-water mixture. The water doesn't refreeze because the salt lowers the temperature it has to be for water to freeze.

That lets the salt melt the rest of the ice. But the excess salt can kill plants and winter wildlife along the road, and it causes rust damage to cars.

So some places have begun melting ice with a product made out of corn.

This special deicer is called Calcium Magnesium Acetate, or CMA. It's made with the minerals calcium and magnesium that are taken from corn or other natural materials, like coal.

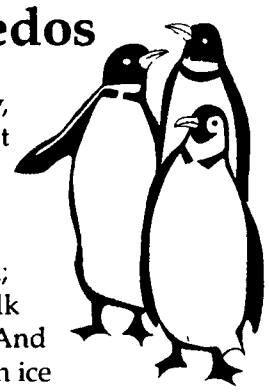
Massachusetts is one state using CMA. The corn deicer protects its wetlands, cranberry bogs and natural wildlife habitat from the effects of road salt. (Salt runs off the roads with the melted water, and too much salt can kill plants along the road.)

More than nature benefits from CMA, though; it also helps keep cars and bridges in good shape. The white powder you see along the bottom of cars in the winter is salt from the roads.

If it stays on the car for a long time, it can damage the paint and metal. The same thing happens to metal bridges. Because CMA is non-corrosive, it will cut through ice and snow — but it won't cause rust!

Scientifically yours,
Twig

Birds in Tuxedos



Even though they don't fly, penguins are still birds that move around in a variety of ways. Their short legs and tall bodies cause them to waddle when they walk; however, they actually walk almost as fast as humans. And they know how to move on ice and snow—by sliding on their bellies.

In addition to getting around on land, penguins are great swimmers. They swim about 8 miles an hour for long periods, and they can go more than 20 miles an hour in short bursts.

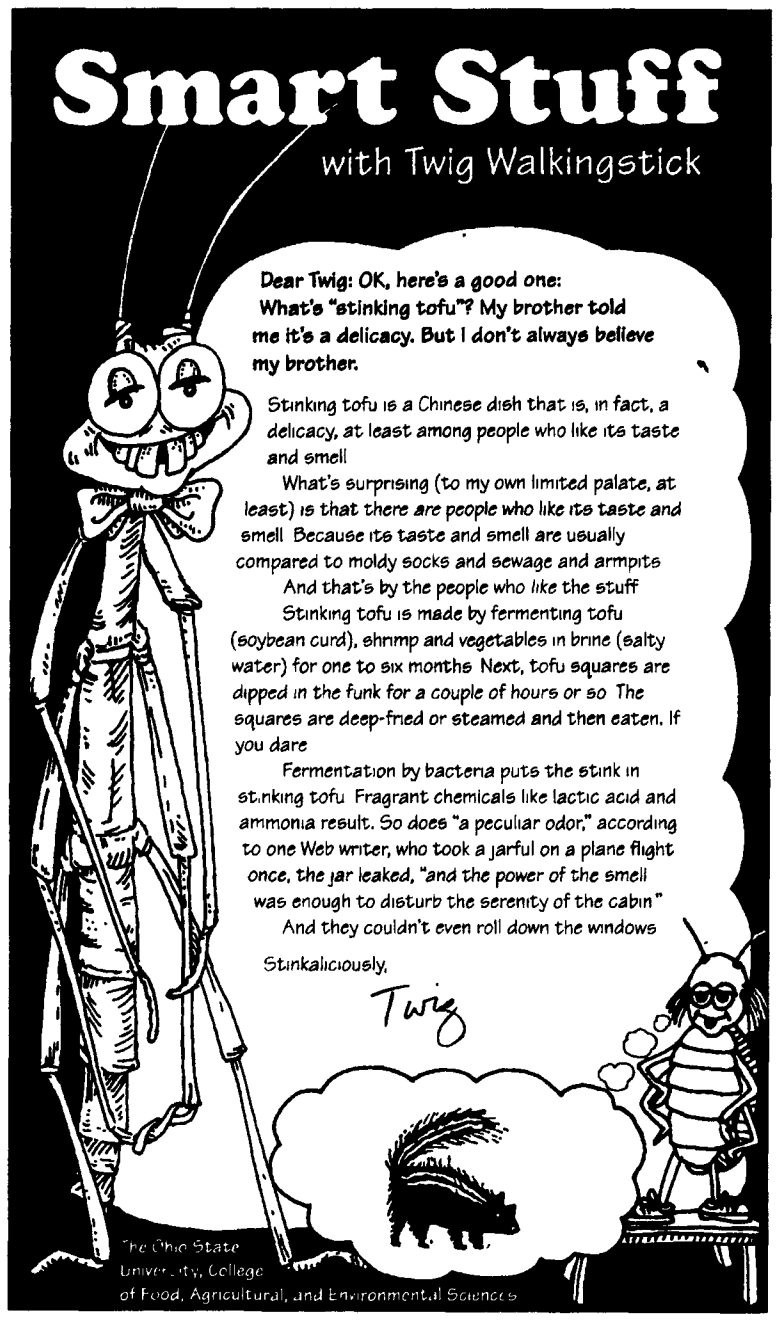
The feathers that cover penguins' bodies are short, thick and waterproof. What makes them look like they are wearing tuxedos is that most of their feathers are black or bluish-gray, except on their belly and chest where they are white. Some penguins have bright orange or yellow feathers on their necks and heads, and some have red, purple and orange beaks.

To keep warm, penguins have thick layers of blubber. Some also have long, long feathers beneath their top ones.

Of the 17 kinds of penguins, the largest is the emperor, which grows to 4 feet tall and can weigh 100 pounds. Most penguins range from 1½ to 3 feet tall and weigh up to 15 pounds.

Smart Stuff

with Twig Walkingstick



Dear Twig: OK, here's a good one: What's "stinking tofu"? My brother told me it's a delicacy. But I don't always believe my brother.
Stinking tofu is a Chinese dish that is, in fact, a delicacy, at least among people who like its taste and smell
What's surprising (to my own limited palate, at least) is that there are people who like its taste and smell Because its taste and smell are usually compared to moldy socks and sewage and armpits
And that's by the people who like the stuff
Stinking tofu is made by fermenting tofu (soybean curd), shrimp and vegetables in brine (salty water) for one to six months Next, tofu squares are dipped in the funk for a couple of hours or so The squares are deep-fried or steamed and then eaten. If you dare
Fermentation by bacteria puts the stink in stinking tofu Fragrant chemicals like lactic acid and ammonia result. So does "a peculiar odor," according to one Web writer, who took a jarful on a plane flight once, the jar leaked, "and the power of the smell was enough to disturb the serenity of the cabin"
And they couldn't even roll down the windows

A New Way to Look at Dieting

Many will resolve to diet this year. In the United States, we need to give credit to eating in a pleasant atmosphere. Many times eating correctly focuses on health but not on enjoying our food and mealtimes.

Today's hurry up mentality has "all of us," adults, children, and parents too busy to eat right. Mealtimes should be pleasant and shared. If you do need to eat alone, make your mealtime nice and enjoyable. Set up a nice place setting for yourself and listen to music or look out the window. When eating with others, make the conversation pleasant. Take time to eat.

Our "Lifestyle Diet" is more important than a short-term "diet."

It is also known that if a person loses a lot of weight in a short amount of time it is likely he or she will gain the weight back in fat and quickly. Here are some lifestyle diet suggestions. To make this lifestyle diet easy, become motivated by your own internal motivation to become healthier. Your chances of victory increase when you motivate yourself.

According to the Mayo Clinic, "Smart weight management helps to boost self-esteem and increase energy, and can improve the control of blood pressure and diabetes."

Don't "work through lunch."

> Japanese Phrase For Good Health.

Take time to eat. It is better to enjoy your food. The reason we should take time to eat is because we tend to not recognize the calories we eat while doing something else. We need to enjoy the opportunity of our mealtime.

Eat in moderation. Eat when you are hungry, and stop when you are full. Choose food because you enjoy it and it makes you feel good and healthy. A good diet goes hand in hand with exercise. For exercise do something fun, make exercise enjoyable.

Don't forget the types of food we eat are still very important.

Whole grains, fruits and vegetables are the best foods for us with the most vitamins and minerals packed in. They also contain water and air which makes their volume more and naturally good for us and low in calories. They are very satisfying because they make you feel full. When you feel satisfied, you don't eat as much.

Choose plenty of whole grains and choose at least four a day. Whole grain products differ from refined grain products in the amount of processing of the grain itself. Refining flour removes the germ containing the fiber and the vitamins and minerals leaving only the starch. Some vitamins and minerals are then added back in during processing. Examples of whole grains are barley, brown rice, oats and whole wheat. Buying whole grains can be confusing, such that the word 'whole" must appear on the label or it does not contain the whole-wheat grain. If it is just refined wheat flour it will only say wheat rather than whole wheat.

So to eat healthy choose many fresh fruit and vegetables.

Fruits and vegetables taste the best in season, so right now, in January, oranges are a great choice. Fruits and vegetables rarely have labels but they contain the highest amounts of vitamins and minerals and fiber in the foods that we eat. Consider buying frozen vegetables, because they come pre-cut and ready to cook or steam.

Plan meals around the plant products the whole grains, vegetables, and fruits because again they will make you feel full and consequently you will be eating less calories.

How you eat is important as well as what you eat.

Sit down, eat together, and talk. Treasure favorite family foods and home cooking.

Dairy Products May Help Weight Loss

COLUMBUS, Ohio — I constantly crave the rich, creamy taste of dairy products like cheese and ice cream, but I don't want to get as big as a cow.

What can I do?

Eat those dairy products 'til your heart's content, say researchers, as long as they're low fat. The calcium in these foods may actually help you lose weight, not gain it.

Recent research conducted at the University of Tennessee found that increasing dietary calcium could increase the loss of weight and body fat by 50 to 70 percent. Results showed that a high level of calcium limits the ability of fat cells to acquire and store fat during periods of overconsumption (such as Christmas dinner) and accelerates fat and weight loss during caloric restriction (such as your New Year's resolution diet).

Researchers studied obese mice and put them on a calorie-restricted diet. The group of mice that were fed a low calcium diet actually gained weight faster, while the group fed a low-fat, high calcium diet had a 60 to 69 percent weight loss. These results were supported by research from the National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey that showed individuals who consumed large amounts of dairy products had a much smaller chance of being obese.

To get these weight-loss results, researchers suggest you get about 1,200 mg of calcium a day, which is about three glasses of milk or 3 to 4 servings of low-fat, calcium-rich foods. Conveniently, that's the same amount of calcium that the USDA already recommends for adult minimum consumption.

But don't start stocking up on Chunky Monkey just yet. Experts stress that low-fat calcium sources like skim milk and low-fat yogurt will provide the best weight-loss results. Calorie and fat content must still be taken into consideration when working dairy products into your diet.

Also, calcium-fortified foods such as orange juice and cereal may be convenient, but these synthetic sources of calcium are not absorbed as efficiently as nature's preferred calcium source — dairy products, which also deliver a whole host of beneficial vitamins and minerals from riboflavin to vitamins A and D. And to make good news even better, recent studies have shown calcium may reduce high blood pressure, ease PMS symptoms and possibly lower the risk of developing colon cancer.

Ahhh, the power of calcium.

Pennsylvania Lamb And Wool Coronation Set For Farm Show's Opening Day

LOU ANN GOOD
Features Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Bittersweet emotions tear at the heart of Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen Lauren Ferringer from Home, Indiana County.

During opening day at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, Lauren will crown her successor to represent the lamb and wool industry.

One year ago, Lauren began her busy year of promoting the industry that she loves. Her duties began with presenting awards during sheep competition and the sheep to shawl contest.

"In the first few days, I had learned more abut the wool aspect of the sheep industry than I had every known before," said Lauren, who has raised Suffolk lambs for three years.

Knowledge continued in the weeks after Farm Show. At the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association annual meeting, Lauren toured the Penn State sheep barns and met industry officials. In May, the Keystone Classic, which is an open show for breeding sheep, sale, and stockman's contest at Penn State, provided another view of the industry.

During the summer, Lauren attended many day camps to encourage youth participation in the lamb and wool industry. Instead of the lamb following Mary to school, a lamb often accompanied Lauren so students could pet and admire a lamb up close.

Lauren explained docking, ear tagging, clipping, and the various lamb and meat cuts. At times, she took lamb menu entrees she prepared and handed out samples to encourage others to use lamb in menu planning.

Lauren attended the Ram Test Sale in August and Ag Progress Days in order to answer questions people asked about the industry.

Radio interviews and addressing audiences at many events helped spread correct information about the lamb and wool industry.

"I'm saddened my reign will come to an end. This has been an exciting and informative year, not only through meeting new people but also by expanding my knowledge of the lamb and wool industry," Lauren said.

Angie Stump, right, Uniontown, serves as princess for the lamb and wool industry. Mary Ziegler, left, is also a princess for the industry and is from York County.

Lauren is a junior at Penn State, where she is pursuing animal science studies. Her goal is to become a doctor of veterinary medicine.

Assisting Lauren in promotion were several princesses. Megan Heath, York, raises 13 sheep made up on Hampshire, Corriedale, and crossbreeds.

The 17-year-old plans to pursue pre-vet studies at Penn State in order to become a large animal and equine vet.

"I am completely independent with raising my own sheep. I buy all my feed and pay for all expenses," she said.

Also fulfilling a year as the industry's princesses are 16-year-old Mary Zeigler, also from York, who raises Romney, Shetland, and Rambouliet breeds, and Angie Stump, Uniontown.

Runner-up Jill Gevin, Cochranton, has raised sheep on the family's Crawford acreage for 10 years. She has eight Oxford sheep of her own and helps her family with their 11 Shropshire and seven Textile breeds.

She also plans to study ag science at Penn State.

As the Northwestern Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen, Jill set up displays and handed out lamb samples and ribbons.

Jill, who desires to continue to promote the sheep and wool industry, will compete for the 2003 Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen title Jan. 11 during the state Farm Show. Other contestants include Ciara Williamson, Cogan Station; Amber Shollenberger, Mohrsville; Cassie Marsh, Clarion; Cassie Mooney, Waynesburg; and Sarah Regula, Brownfield.

Contestants will be judged on four categories:

- Consumer promotional display — A display that promotes the sheep and wool industry.
- Public speaking — Each contestant must give a 2-5 minutes speech before judges and the audience Jan. 11 at 4 p.m. in Meeting Room E, second-floor of the Farm Show Complex. The presentation will address some aspect of the sheep and wool industry, be informative, and include how the contestant would help promote the industry.
- Interview — Each contestant will be interviewed by a panel of judges beginning a 3 p.m. Jan. 11, in meeting room E of the Farm Show Building. Contestants will be evaluated on general sheep production knowledge, the sheep and wool industry, communication skills, poise, personality, enthusiasm, and availability to fulfill responsibilities of the Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen title.
- Writing skills — Each contestant is required to submit an article introducing herself and future plans for promoting the lamb and wool industry. The article must be 200 words or less and double-spaced. Judging will be based on clarity, use of language, writing skills, and ability to express thoughts and ideas.

The coronation banquet will follow judging.

Virginia Dairy Princess Coronation Is Jan. 22

STAUNTON, VA. — The Virginia Dairy Princess Coronation is scheduled in conjunction with the Virginia State Dairymen's Association 96th annual convention Holiday Inn Golf and Conference Center Staunton, Virginia, 4-6 p.m., Wednesday January 22.

Banquet immediately follows coronation. Tickets cost $25 for adults, $10 for students.

To order banquet tickets, send checks to Virginia State Dairymen's Association, P.O. Box 866 Harrisonburg, VA 22803.

ANSWER — David writes that his family has a problem with their dog barking in the morning. Starting at 6 a.m., he will bark for an hour. In the afternoon, the dog knows what time David will return home from school and starts barking a half hour before he gets home. Nothing the family has tried seems to work and David's mom is tired of it. Thanks to Joyce Stuff, Mercersburg, who writes: Tell David to take his dog to obedience school. There are certainly dog kennels in his area that David can contact to find a dog obedience school. We have a well-behaved dog because she went to school.

Benuel Fisher, Strasburg, writes that he had a dog that barked so much and he couldn't get it to stop. He laid a hose near the dog pen. Whenever the dog started barking nonstop, he sprayed water in the dog's face and sternly said, "No." After a few treatments, the dog's incessant barking stopped.

Fisher also has been told of someone who shone a bright flashlight in the dog's eyes and said a stern "no" whenever the dog barked. That also fixed the problem.

Amos Beiler, Quarryville, writes that perhaps the dog is lonely and bored. If you get another dog as a companion, he would probably be happier.

ANSWER — Doris Wooleyhan wants wool fabric. A reader e-mailed that wool fabric is available from Woolrich in Clinton County. Colors and weights vary but prices are reasonable. A few months ago, they had strips already cut for rug braiding. If you can't travel to the store, contact them by e-mail or phone, and they will mail fabric. Woolrich Outlet Store, Park Avenue, Woolrich, PA 17779. Phone (570) 769-7401 or e-mail www.woolrich.com

ANSWER — A reader wanted to know where to find parts for a three-point hitch log splitter, P.T.O. powered, called the Unicorn. It is a cone-shaped splitter manufactured by the Thackery Co. Inc. The reader doesn't have an address for the company but needs a replacement tip. Thanks to T. Grove, York Co., who writes that he has a complete cone for the log splitter. Cost $75. If interested, call Walt at (717) 927-9168.

George Rousis, Bally, writes that he has a complete P.T.O unit to sell for $15. Call (610) 845-7325.

ANSWER — For Edwin Hoffman who had canning jars that he no longer wanted, Bleam recommends that he checks with "crafty" persons. He saw them at A.C. Moore painted for the holidays. Some had votive candles inside, and some had votive holders that fit in the top. Some were even made into lamps.

Another reader writes that surely Amish and Mennonite folks would be glad for them. The reader is interested in purchasing one of Hoffman's pressure canners if it is reasonably priced. Call her at (717) 438-3837.

Amos Beiler, Quarryville, recommends Hoffman brings the canning jars to Lancaster County to sell to hundreds of Amish and Mennonite ladies who continue to do a lot of canning.

ANSWER — Lena Oberholtzer, Leola, needs a seal for a 6-quart Mirro-Matic pressure cooker, part number 396M, which she believes is no longer manufactured. Replacement parts are available for her pressure cooker at Cooks Corner. Call 1 800 236 2433, writes Joyce Stuff, Mercersburg.

Alice Rhoad, Grantville, writes that she thinks the seal is available at Good's Store, Schaefferstown or try Mirro/Wearever Co., P.O. Box 1330, Manitowoc, WI 54221-1330. Call 1-800-527-7727 between 7:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m., or Cooks Corner at 1-800-236-2433.

ANSWER — A Lancaster County reader requested directions to make goat's milk soap. Thanks to Michelle Good for writing that she found this recipe on the Internet and has been using it for years. Be sure you know the dangers of working with lye (which causes fumes and burns) before trying this recipe.

Goat Milk Soap

12-ounces lye
3 cups cool water

Melt fat and let cool, which takes a while. A problem when working with lye and goat milk is that it will curdle when you add the lye so here is a trick: add the lye to 2 cups water (always use a stainless steel kettle) let this cool a little, then add the other cup of water and goat milk. Fat needs to be at 85 degrees and lye at 75 degrees. When both are at the right temperatures, add fat to the lye mix (slowly). Stir the mixture until it traces (add scent at this time if desired 3-4 tablespoons). Pour into molds. Michelle uses plastic show boxes that have been greased with Vaseline. Insulate with blankets and let sit in a draft-free place for 24 hours. After the 24 hours, soap should be ready to cut into bars. Let age three weeks before use.

ANSWER — A reader wanted a darning ball. Mary Zimmerman, Ephrata, and several others suggest using a light bulb when darning socks. Place the bulb part against the hole, and hold the screw end when darning. Another reader suggests using a dried bottle-shaped or ball-shaped gourd. Insert the gourd into the heel or toe of sock. Dried gourds keep for many years if kept in a dry place.

Nancy Shaffer, Peach Bottom, has several darning balls and is willing to sell one. Call her at (717) 548-3960 after 6 p.m.

About 1,000 Attend Ice Cream Celebration For Retired Dairyman

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — "Let's treat everyone to ice cream!"

That's just what the children and grandchildren of Richard Pellman decided to do in honor of his almost 50 years of employment at Turkey Hill.

Pellman and his wife, Betty, are residents at Landis Homes Retirement Community, Lititz, so the "everyone" who was served ice cream at the New Year's Eve celebration included more than 600 residents and almost 400 staff persons.

Pellman, who is confined to a wheelchair since suffering a stroke last summer, was asked to select three of his favorite flavors to be served. They included chocolate, vanilla, and coffee.

Turkey Hill management and employees helped celebrate with the Pellman family by arranging for the large Turkey Hill cow to "park" on the retirement community campus for a period of weeks. Hanging from the cow's side is a large banner "Christmas card" with words of gratefulness and remembrance for Pellman and his many years of service to Turkey Hill. Attending the New Year's Eve afternoon party was the president of Turkey Hill, Quintin Frey; sales supervisor Mike Horst, and the sales manager Jim Bolin.

"Other than the founders, I think Dick would be the longest employee at Turkey Hill," said Frey, who himself is a third generation owner of the company.

Pellman began working for the small Turkey Hill Dairy as a deliveryman in 1950. When he retired from full-time work in 1987, he was sales manager of a company that had reached out to markets in several east coast states. He continued to work part-time in several capacities until his most recent "retirement" in 1999.

"One of my favorite parts of the job was helping to create new flavors and to develop the program of feature flavors," said Pellman at the celebration. The feature flavors program allows the company to "test" new flavors in small markets to help determine whether or not to add them to the entire market.

Pellman is still a supporter of Turkey Hill, says his daughter Phyllis Pellman Good. His one major concern about the party she said, "was that the ice cream be dipped correctly and presented well."

Put A Stop To Bypass Starting

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Among the many shortcuts used in farming, none is potentially more hazardous than bypass starting an engine.

The danger of bypass starting is implied in its name. It bypasses all neutral start switches that may be included in the tractor's electrical and hydraulic systems.

Bypass starting involves touching a wrench or screwdriver to the terminals of the starter motor or to the solenoid of a tractor or any self-propelled vehicle engine, which bypasses all tractor neutral start switches.

With a few bright sparks and electrical snaps, the circuit is completed and the starter engages, starting the engine.

In some cases, that's not where the story ends. Every year, a few farmers or mechanics attempt to bypass start a tractor or vehicle that is in gear, and it immediately lurches forward or backward.

Too startled to jump away, they are pulled down by the drive wheel, crushed and seriously injured or killed. It takes less time than it took you to read this paragraph.

Tractors with wet clutches pose the added hazard of letting the engine start before the tractor begins to move, providing a false sense of security.

Neutral Start Switch Check

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — You can help avoid the temptation of trying to bypass start an engine by checking regularly to make sure that neutral start switches function correctly. The procedure for this check, which takes only a few seconds, is as follows:

- Ensure that no bystanders or obstructions are around the tractor, should it inadvertently start.
- Depress the clutch and brake pedal. Attempt to start the engine with the gear disengaged and the PTO in neutral. The starters should engage.
- Depress the clutch and brake pedal. Attempt to start the tractor with the gears engaged and the PTO in neutral. The starter should NOT engage.
- Depress the clutch and brake pedal. Attempt to start the tractor with the gears in neutral and the PTO engaged. Again, the starter should NOT engage.
- On tractors that are equipped with clutch mounted start switches, depress the brake pedal but not the clutch pedal. Place the transmission and PTO in neutral. The starter should NOT engage.
- If either switch doesn't work correctly, replace it.

Collector Items Available At Pennsylvania Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For the 13th consecutive year, limited edition collector items will be offered at the state farm show. All items are built with permission of the Pennsylvania Farm Show Commission and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. The 87th show is a banner year as it marks the grand opening of the newly expanded facilities.

Bank collectors should like the replica of a 1/25th scale 1960 GMC ½ ton pick-up truck. Two-tone with Pennsylvania Farm Show graphics, certificates and gift boxed.

Winross truck collectors are offered a 10-wheeler Kenworth truck with a new design knuckle boom self-loader and simulated cut logs. A few of the Freightliner semi-truck (18 wheeler) pulling a flatbed loaded with a simulated board load were made. Both trucks commemorate the states' hardwood lumber industry.

Show tractor — Choice of Farmall 450 or Farmall 400 tractor with pewter plates to commemorate the Pennsylvania Show. Included is an audio cassette tape with tractor sounds of both the diesel and gas powered engine. On display will be a full-sized Farmall 450 tractor owned by Jamie and Glen Longenecker of Elizabethtown.

How To Prevent Falls On The Farmstead

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Falls are the most common accidents in agriculture, yet they are perhaps the most difficult to guard against. The best weapon against unintentional falls is staying alert. Your chances of falling are increased by haste, fatigue, emotional upset, illness, alcohol and drugs.

- Keep all stairs, floors and working surfaces in good repair and as free as possible of mud, manure or snow. Use de-icers on outside stairs, walks or entrances, etc.
- Provide sturdy handrails where needed. Every stairway should have one.
- Keep your workshop and other working areas clean and free of slipping and tripping hazards.
- Keep ladders in good condition. Use the 4 to 1 rule for straight ladders, setting the base one foot out from a wall for every four-foot up.
- Wear shoes or boots with non-skid soles and heels.
- Do not work in a high place when the weather is windy, stormy or when you are ill, tired or taking strong medications.

Inspection

✓Are surfaces slippery from ice, mud, snow, manure, oil or other chemical spills?

✓Are ladders in good repair or do they. need to be replaced?

✓Do shoes or boots have good non-slip?

ANTHONY K. WIKRENT
Cabin Fever Expo

YORK (York Co.) — The seventh annual Cabin Fever Expo opens 9 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, January 18 and 19, at the York County Fairgrounds Memorial Hall East and West.This year's special feature is a large indoor pond with dozens of model steamboats hoisting anchors and chugging away, operated by members of the North American Steamboat Modeler's Association.

Cabin Fever Expo is an exhibition devoted to all types of model engineering, featuring live operation of scale model engines, and other types of machinery, including machine tools, tractors, aircraft, and trains.

Cabin Fever Expo has grown rapidly to become one of the two most popular shows in North America for home shop machinists and metal working hobbyists. Show organizers Gary and Jared Schoenly expect this year's event will draw more than 6,000 attendees, in addition to the hundreds of vendors and exhibitors.

Additional space this year allows space for the indoor steamboat pond. Jared, Gary's son, is studying mechanical engineering at the University of Pittsburgh, and did the necessary design calculations for a plastic-lined 30x50 feet pond, containing 10,000 gallons of water.

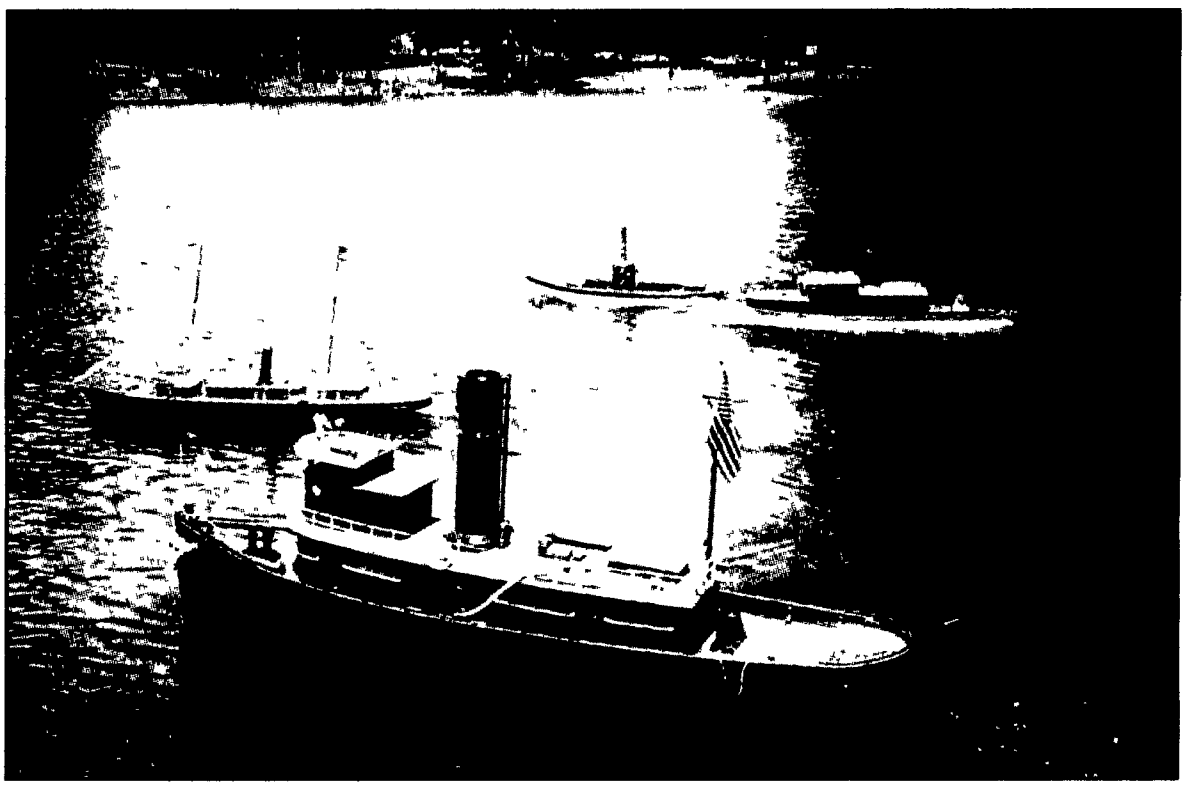
Construction materials and know-how are provided by Gary's brother-in-law, who operates a pool construction and maintenance company.

Attendance has been recorded from almost all 48 contiguous states at past Cabin Fever Expos, and this year a special tour group representing European live steamers is expected to attend.

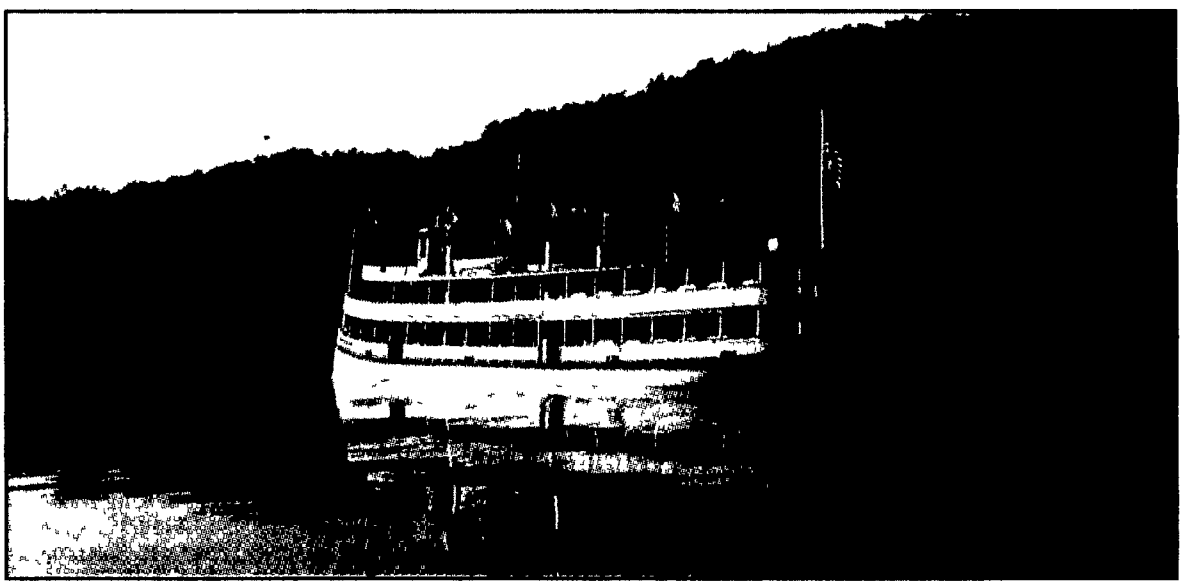
About two dozen model steamboats, ranging from one foot to four feet in length, will be operated by members of the North American Steamboat Modeler's Association (NASMA). NASMA is group of model steamboat enthusiasts interested in building and operating all varieties of nautical live steam models. Tugboats are the most popular type of model steamboat operated, along with steam launches.

Modelers like launches because there is no deck hiding the steam power plant and auxiliary machinery within the hull. The engine and boilers thus are open to full view, inspection — and admiration. All the models are radio-controlled, and run on alcohol or "camping gas," a small can containing a combination of butane and propane that can be purchased at any sporting goods store. The pond is large enough for a handful of the smaller models to operate simultaneously, but may not be big enough for the turning radius of the larger models. Those will be able to run back and forth across the pond, and perhaps be turned around by hand.

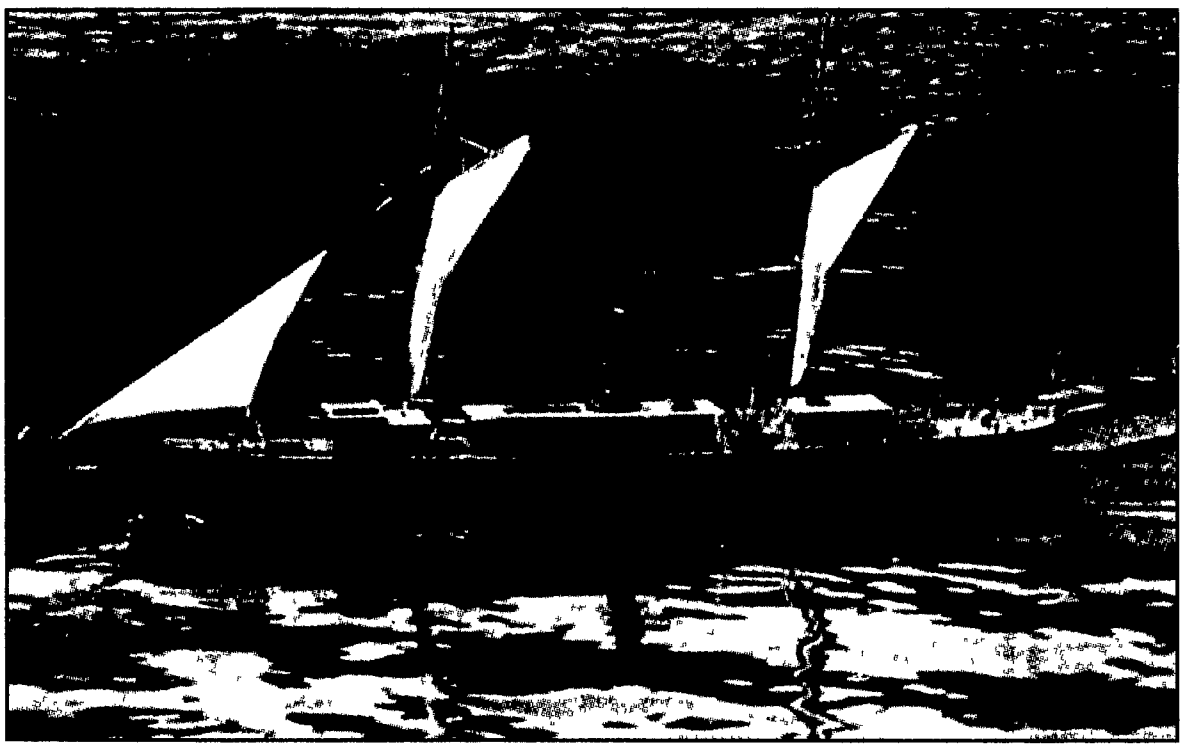
Steve Siegel, editor of the NASMA newsletter, said that one NASMA member from Lititz plans to bring his four-foot model of a Lake Chautauqua steamboat, which many people have mistaken for the real item when viewing photos.



North American Steamboat Modelers' Association will have dozens of model steamboats hoisting anchors and chugging away in the indoor pond.



The pond is large enough for a handful of the smaller models to operate simultaneously, but may not be big enough for the turning radius of the larger models. Those will be able to run back and forth across the pond, and perhaps be turned around by hand.



Modelers like launches because there is no deck hiding the steam power plant and auxiliary machinery within the hull. The engine and boilers thus are open to full view, inspection — and admiration. All the models are radio-controlled, and run on alcohol or "camping gas," a small can containing a combination of butane and propane that can be purchased at any sporting goods store.

The NASMA steamboaters will be making a concerted effort to have some of the smaller model steamboats available for operation by children and teens.Steve also expects a full-size 25-foot steam launch, the Adamy III, to be displayed by Charlie Roth, Gardiner, N. J. The hull is a design of the Rochester Launch Co., Rochester, N. Y. The engine is a 10-horsepower Crescent compound, and the boiler is a 40 square foot vertical fire tube boiler. This steam power plant is about 20 years old, and was built and previously owned by the owner of the Crescent Engine Co., Point Pleasant, N.J.

The propeller is 23-inches in diameter. Because the boiler burns either coal or wood, and the launch will be displayed indoors, Charlie will not be able to "fire 'er up."

But that won't be a problem for the estimated 1,000 model operating engines. Compressed air lines will be available to run those engines normally requiring steam. For the internal combustion engines, Gary and Jared have made sure the halls will be well ventilated.

Altogether, 400 to 500 exhibitors are expected at Cabin Fever Expo. In addition to hundreds of engines, machine tools and other mechanical devices will be on display. Displays include all types of model engineering: hot air engines, gas engines, internal combustion engines, machine tools, airplanes, boats, ships, trains, cars, and tractors.

In addition, 80 vendors will display a wide range of goods for sale, including complete model engine kits, parts and components, plans, machine tools, tool and shop accessories, equipment, and books.

An exhibitors sale area allows participants to sell up to six items.This year, Gary and Jared have also organized an Iron Fever Auction for Friday, January 17, beginning at 4 p.m. Two hundred lots have been consigned, including an Atlas Metal Shaper, a number of different make lathes, a few South Bends, a watchmaker's lathe, hot air engines, hit and miss engines, rare machinery catalogs, and Buddy-L toys. Inspection of items being auctioned will be from noon to 4 p.m. on Friday.

$5 admission covers both days; children under 12 will be admitted free.

Six seminars on various aspects of home shop machining taught by accomplished craftsmen will be offered at various times during the show. No additional costs are charged to attend seminars by Jerry Frisbie, Bruce Harr, and Chuck Kuhn.

- Lathe rebuilding and scraping - Roger Grosser
- Fundamentals of CNC machining - Marty Knox
- Model builder materials - Cliff Schrock

British Dealers Selling At American Shows

With the United Kingdom tourist trade down, British antiques dealers are bringing their wares to some of the major American antique shows. Others like the Silver Fund have added a Manhattan gallery to their London address. Some dealers, such as Alistair Sampson are sharing exhibition space. In this instance, Sampson is sharing exhibition space with American textile dealer Cora Ginsburg at the January 16-19 New York Ceramics Fair.

American collectors have shown a growing interest in early English pottery and Delft. Perhaps because it fits in so well with country and folk art pieces.

However, there are many misconceptions about English Delft that English dealers hope to correct. Adding to its appeal is the price tag. 18th century Bristol Delft plates can sell from $700 to several thousand in shops. Probably one reason for the relatively modest price is the lack of knowledge and hype.

When was the last time you heard of a museum exhibit, new books or record setting auction prices for Delft? This is a category where there are discoveries yet to be made if you know what to look for.

The tin-enamel glaze technique used to make Delft goes back as far as 1000 B.C. to Mesopotamis. The Babylonian potters used them to cover brick reliefs.

The next known useage was by Persian potters under Islamic invaders. Various Moslem conquests brought the tin-glaze along the northern coast of Africa into Moorish Spain.From there to Italy...through the island of Majorca. From there to France, Italy, Holland and England.

When this tin-enamel pottery was made in Italy and Spain, it is called Maiolica; in France, Faience; in Holland, Delft; and in England, Delft.

In England this type of pottery began in the middle of the 16th century, with the help of emigre' Dutch potters. Pieces had a Dutch influence. However by the 17th century English Delft was distinguished by inscribed and dated examples.

After the middle of the 17th century, drinking items, such as mugs and jugs featured a briefly French influence. It became Dutch briefly, during the 18th century when William III came to the throne. With Chinese pottery and porcelain brought to England by the English East Company, Delft pottery took on an Oriental look.

CLUES: Major producers of Delft were in London, Bristol and Liverpool in the 18th century. Bristol Delft is usually a bluish-white. London pieces have a whiter glaze.

Lambeth Delft will have a pinkish look where the glaze has worn thin. It was also made in Ireland and Scotland, but referred to as English Delft.

Bristol pieces have a more naive or folk art style than London pieces. From plates to punch bowls political subjects and inscriptions were used. Other forms such as shoes and serving pieces were made. Items for tea service are rare, especially tea pots. Few survived because of their soft nature. Also rare are sauceboats, tureens and cream jugs. Many Bristol tiles favored biblical subjects and made great quantities of small tiles. Wall pockets were made primarily by Liverpool and Lambeth potters.

It can be difficult to tell Enlish Delft from some Dutch pieces.

Especially true with some pieces with inscriptions. Dutch workmen came to England, but creamware from Leeds was sent to Holland to be decorated. So, a piece of dutch Delft can have an English inscription.

Hands-on experience and talking with an expert are a must for would-be collectors.

Antiques Questions And Answers

This trunk was bought 25 years ago in an antique shop. It has brass hinges and a lock with a fish on it. It cost $900. What would it be worth today and can you tell me anything about it?

M.R.-Staten Island, NY

Your burl-wood chest while very handsome isn't as old as it looks. During the late 19th century reproductions of 18th century chests with elaborate brass hardware were popular. The shape and feet suggest this was a sea chest made for a naval officer. It could cost $2,000 or more in a shop today.

I purchased this tile at a recent yard sale. It depicts three Spanish ships possibly from Columbus's fleet. On the back it is imprinted "Triana. Mensaque Rodriguez YCa. Sevilla. Hope you can tell me the value and where to sell it.

I.F.B. - Hardwick, NJ

Your souvenir tile from Spain is 20th century. You could sell it at your garage sale for $10.

This ironing board was a wedding gift to me on May 10, 1939. It is the only ironing board that I ever used for 63 years. Still in good shape. Is it worth anything?

L.T. - Apollo, PA

Your ironing board obviously has great sentimental value. In the collectibles marketplace it could find a buyer for $50.

I bought this milk glass console set at a summer garage sale. Have been told it is "Jeanette glass." I saw the candle holders only at Tarentum Fleatique for $45. What is my set worth?

B.L. - Bairdford, PA

Your 1940s, 50s Jeanette, pink console set could sell at the flea market for $75-100.

CNH Executive Takes International Leadership Post

CHICAGO, Ill. — Allen R. Rider, vice president, North America New Holland Agriculture Business, New Holland, Pa., has been named 2003 Vice Chairman-Agriculture of the Association of Equipment Manufacturers (AEM), the international trade and business development resource for companies that manufacture equipment, products and services used worldwide in the construction, agricultural, industrial, mining, forestry and utility fields.

As an AEM officer, Rider will help set the guidelines and operating policies of the Association on behalf of its members in areas including product safety and technical services, equipment statistics, government legislation and regulations, international market support, education and training, among other issues.

Since joining Sperry New Holland in 1979, Rider has served in a variety of positions including senior research engineer, product test director, vice president of engineering and vice president of operations, directing the engineering and manufacturing operations in North America.

Allen R. Rider

In addition to his responsibilities at CNH, Rider has been an active participant in the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE) having served both on the Association's board of directors and as its treasurer prior to his election as ASAE president in 1986 and fellow in 1987. All New 1910 Commodity Air Cart Introduced By John Deere LENEXA, Kan. — Growers are looking for productive seeding and fertilizing systems to help them cover more acres in less time. The all-new John Deere 1910 Commodity Air Cart includes feature enhancements to make it the most productive air cart that John Deere has ever built. The new models include 195-, 250-, 270-, 340-, 350-, and 430-bu. tank capacities.

"Increased productivity starts with a new telescoping spout that helps to shorten fill time and makes topping off the tanks easier," said Steve Detrick, project manager, John Deere seeding group. "The new spout also provides improved movement when going from one tank to another, matching tank height more easily."

Tires are easier to select and a customer can now choose dual front tires and wheels on tow-behind models. Enhanced flotation from the duals helps maximize yields as growers use these options to match seeding equipment to field conditions.

"A new high rate meter allows increased metering rates from 40 to 265 pounds per acre," Detrick said. "The new meter is best used for high rates of fertilizer, fragile or large seeds such as soy or garbanzo beans, or long-bearded seeds such as oats."

A new optional fill light package provides improved visibility for safer, more convenient operation during nighttime hours. Two 35-watt halogen lamps illuminate all areas for filling or emptying the tanks at night.

Two other features include a new manifold design to improve sealing and tank pressurization; and an open lid indicator to assure operators that the individual tank lids are clamped shut and the cart is ready for seeding.

The 1910 cart is also compatible with the John Deere GreenStar® Guidance Systems — Parallel Tracking and AutoTrac. These systems eliminate the need for mechanical row markers, improve seeding performance by reducing overlaps or skips, and allow for seeding at night or in extremely dusty conditions.

Florida Teacher Receives First Syngenta Ag Education Award

WILMINGTON, Del. — Jodi Geiger, who teaches agricultural science at Pine Ridge High School in Deltona, Fla., has received the first Syngenta Advocate for Agricultural Education Award.

The Syngenta Award honors one agriculture teacher nationally for conducting the highest quality education programs. Geiger was also cited for her leadership in civic, community, agriculture/agribusiness and professional activities.

Throughout the coming year, Geiger will work with Syngenta, a world-leading agribusiness, to focus attention on the tremendous contributions of agriculture to society and emphasize the growing need for more students and teachers to prepare future generations of crop producers and those who support them. The shortage of agricultural science teachers is among the most serious problems facing agriculture today.

"Only 50 percent of all college students who major in agricultural education actually go into teaching when they graduate," said Bob Woods, chairman of Syngenta U.S. "Twenty-five percent of those who begin teaching quit after one year, and another 25 percent drop out within five years."

As a special project of the National FFA Foundation, Syngenta has provided the National FFA Organization with funding of $200,000 for the development of a program to recruit, retain, and reward agriculture teacners. The money will be used in a variety of ways, including a public awareness effort, production and distribution of training and support materials for current and future agriculture teachers, and workshops to help recruit new teachers to the classroom.

Woods Launches Search For Oldest Batwing®

OREGON, Ill. — Woods Equipment Company has launched a nationwide search for the oldest Batwing® folding-wing rotary cutter. The winner will be able to retire their old Batwing for a brand new BW180 Batwing — the latest model in Woods' line of powerful folding wing cutters.

Woods pioneered advancements in folding wing cutters with the introduction of the original Batwing in 1964. Early next year the company is launching its newest Batwing, the BW180, a 15-foot standard-duty model, and the contest winner will receive one of the first.

A BW180 will be awarded to the current owner of the oldest documented Batwing. The Batwing must be complete and operational. The prize includes shipping to a Woods dealer near the winner's residence or place of business. A cash award will be granted to cover any applicable sales tax. Entries must include front and rear photographs, and a completed registration form. Contest forms are available at all Woods' dealers. The contest runs through Dec. 31, 2002.

For complete details on the Oldest Batwing Contest and other Woods products, visit www.woodsonline.com, call toll free 1-866-869-6637, or contact us at info@woodsonline.com.

Frontier Equipment Enters Tillage Market With Heavy Offset Disks

LENEXA, Kan. — Frontier Equipment introduces a whole new line of heavy offset disks to handle high residue crops, to renovate pasture, and to till in severe-duty applications such as soil mixing and land reclamations. These heavy-duty disks are designed for the toughest working conditions and are available in 8- to 25-foot widths.

"The new Frontier offset disks have been designed to cover thousands of acres in tough operating conditions," says Steve Geick, marketing manager, Frontier Equipment. "Their rugged design will give many years of dependable tillage service, and allow for application in a wide variety of field conditions. There are three categories of disks that Frontier will offer — general purpose disks, 8- to 25-foot sizes; heavy-duty disks, 9- to 20-foot sizes; and super-duty ag and construction disks, 11- to 20-foot sizes."

Frontier heavy offset disks.

The new general purpose disks can handle light plowing applications with moderate-to-high residue incorporation. The 8- to 17-foot disks come in a rigid frame design and the 19- to 25-foot disks come in a wing-fold design. The gang carriers and main frame are made of high-strength tubular steel, and they are welded for maximum strength and durability.

Other features include dual tapered oil bath roller gang bearings for long life and reduced maintenance, a self-leveling hitch, and a transport width of under 12 feet when folded on the larger models. Bearing wear plates are standard on the 14- through 25-foot models, and all disks have been designed for years of dependable service.

Pleasant Valley Farms Pioneers Odor Control Programs

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Pleasant Valley Farms announced it is proceeding with a new odor control pilot program at its Sullivan Farm in Sullivan Township, Tioga County, as one of several odor reduction technologies being implemented by the major Pennsylvania hog producer.

Pleasant Valley operates in 22 — or about a third of — Pennsylvania counties. More than 140 individual farmers receive nearly $12 million a year to raise hogs under contracts with the agricultural firm, which also owns 15 sow farms.

"It's no secret that odor is a primary concern in some communities where large quantities of manure are stored and then used as natural fertilizer. The issue is especially contentious during manure application in areas where homes and farms co-exist," said Bob Ruth, president of Pleasant Valley.

"The challenge is to identify new ways to reduce odor, yet to retain manure's value for recycling as a natural organic fertilizer, and to stay cost competitive in the U.S. hog market. Our ability to balance these needs will influence the future of farming in Pennsylvania," Ruth said.

Current odor and nutrient reduction technologies being used or piloted by Pleasant Valley include:

- Use of Phytase in all swine feed. The natural enzyme in Phytase improves phosphorus uptake in the animals so that it can be reduced in feed.
- Methane digestion. A project at Pine Hurst Acres near Danville, Montour County, being done in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State University.
- Stored manure treatments, such as fine oil surface spraying on under-building manure storage and straw covers for exterior lagoons.
- Aerobic treatment (aeration) piloted at Pine Hills Farm, near Troy, Bradford County.

"Positive feedback from testing, staff and farm neighbors indicates that the treatment at Pine Hill is reducing odor at both the lagoons and during crop application," Ruth said. "Having multiple farms with consistent stock, practices and characteristics, such as feed and lagoon systems, really helps us to compare techniques."

The aerobic system uses a pump to inject air into the manure while it is still in the storage lagoons, with a resulting odor reduction in the lagoons as well as during pumping and cropland application.

Based on success with the Pine Hill aerobic pilot, Pleasant Valley will install the system at Sullivan Farm, located near Mansfield, Tioga County. Both Pine Hall and Sullivan have two-stage, outdoor lagoons and are sow farms.

Ruth said he expects the system to be installed at Sullivan in late spring, so the benefits of odor reduction would be expected in the fall, at the earliest. Pleasant Valley is seeking a system that will be compatible with some of the other emerging technologies, such as solids separation, which may be used in manure odor management in the near future. Cost is estimated at about $20,000 for one aeration system.

Sullivan currently is using an anaerobic system, a common method of manure treatment used in livestock production.

MESSICK'S
MILLER PRO

1060 THROWS GREAT!

Our 1060 Blower does a good job throwing the silage. I like the auger style feed rather than the other styles out there. You don't always have to run the blower at top speed when you are filling the silo. I like the competitiveness of Messick's and the way they stand behind their machines with service and warranty.

Mel Nissley - Middletown, PA

At Susquehanna Valley Dairy we wish all our customers a Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year. Although milk prices have been low and cow prices have been high, this will be our best year ever. Thank you for your business.

Listed below are a handful of our customers:
- S. Glick, Manheim, bought a herd in Canada this August. In all the heat, he was shipping 81 lb. per day.
- R. Martin, New Holland bought a herd in Canada. In the heat this summer he was shipping 83 lb. per day.
- J Oberholtzer, New Holland bought a herd in Vermont that peaked in the high eighties.
- J. Esh, Spring Garden, bought a herd in Vermont that peaked at 87 lb. per day.
- C. Petersheim, Quarryville, bought a herd in Vermont. I met him at the New Holland horse sale this spring and he said his cows were averaging 97 lb. per day.

These are of course some of the highest producing herds; however, there are many more in the 70 and 80 lb. range. Another very encouraging thing is when a dairyman tells me two or three years after buying a herd that he hasn't bought a cow since.

What can a dairyman learn from this difficult year? Glenn Shirk, former extension agent, said "In a difficult year, dairymen need to learn to work smarter, not harder." My dad always said a smooth sea never made a good sailor. Will Rogers said "Even if you're heading in the right direction, you better keep moving or people will run over you."

Listed below are some herds currently for sale.

Herds
- 40 cow A.I. Holstein herd. 21,000 D.H.I.A. 4.0 f. 180,000 S.C.C. Herd has 35 first and second calf.
- 53 cow A.I. Holstein herd. A top herd for type. Udders, feet and legs are super. Currently milking 65 lbs. with 14 dry cows.
- 35 heifers from Canada. Mostly registered. All hand picked from three herds. Top heifers. Due in Jan. and Feb. and a few in March.
- 20 A.I. sired Holstein heifers from a 100 cow herd that was sold in PA. Really good heifers due Jan. and Feb.
- 80 cow A.I. sired Jersey herd, 47 lb. per cow, 4.8 f, 3.8 pro. 30 bred heifers.
- 60 cow Registered free stall Holstein herd 24,000 D.H.I.A.

If you want a good herd this winter, call and get your name in early. They say for every good herd that's for sale, there are about 12 junk herds. Don't waste your time looking at all the junk. Call me, I'll get you fixed up in a day.

May the year 2003 be a prosperous year for you.

BULLS
We have service age bulls, and younger available. We specialize in choosing the right bull to fit your breeding program, focusing on type, longevity and production.

100% Pure Unprocessed Corn Oil

The Economical Coat Enhancer, With selenium and vitamin E added

A product of
Catalog Plus

Feed at least 1 oz per 500 lb of weight per day

Owners of bred mares: feed Best Bloom to give your foals a jump-start on life
Horse Farmers: feed Best Bloom to help your work teams shed out winter hair and be energized for heavy Spring work
Horse owners in general: you will love!! the shine this product puts on your horse

Many care providers are tempted to overfeed proteins and minerals. The feeding program that provides a 10-12% protein from grain and a good green hay that is free of dust or mold is adequate in most cases. Most operations will benefit greatly from using this product as an addition to an already good feeding program It will provide the extra bloom that makes horsekeeping so rewarding

Announcing:
Crude Soy Oil Now Available
With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer soybean oil as an animal nutrition product. Processing the soybeans ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

Crude Soybean Oil
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. Crude soy oil is a natural alternative to animal fats and provides needed energy in various rations.

Uses of Crude Soy Oil Include:
- Use as a high energy feed ingredient in swine and poultry diets.
- Especially useful in sow lactation diets, pig starter and grow/finish diets.
- Used as an added energy source in broiler, turkey and layer feeds.
- Can be used for dust control purposes.
- Can be used as a lubricant for feeding systems.

Advantages of Crude Soy Oil:
- Use as a direct replacement for animal fat.
- Vegetable based product.
- Holding tank does not need to be heated if temperature is above 30 degrees, which reduces storage and handling costs compared to animal fat.
- Bulk delivery, partial loads available direct to farm by Keystone Mills.
- Customer may pick up to save delivery costs.

Other Soy Products Available:
- Keystone offers Golden Pro 46 XP which is 46% protein - 6-7% oil, Golden Meal 40 which is 40% crude protein with 18% oil.

Keystone Mills Soybean Exchange Program
- We will take your soybeans in trade for Golden ProXP 46, Golden Meal 40.
- Contact Keystone Mills for details on our soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products.

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased."

PA BQA Program
The PA BQA program moved forward with additional funding from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, USDA and the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association to stretch checkoff dollars. Certification meetings were held throughout the year along with the development of a consumer marketing and promotion campaign. Since the inception of the program in 2001, more than 800 people have completed the two-part training series to become BQA certified producers.

Irradiation Seminars
Foodservice, retail and cooperative extension personnel learned about irradiation technology this past summer. The checkoff sponsored events brought together experts from the food irradiation field for educational seminars that discussed topics including new technology, marketing techniques and consumer acceptance trends.

Youth Programs
1st through 4th grade students continue to learn about food safety from Patty Melt, the PBC's food safety mascot. Children discover the 4C's of food safety - "Cool It, Clean It, Cook It and Don't Cross It" during interactive programs at farm city days across the Commonwealth. Checkoff dollars also provide state educators with beef and veal based teaching modules to incorporate into classes at all grade levels.

NUTRITION

Beef Up the Blood Supply
Beef checkoff dollars helped "Beef Up the Blood Supply" at three blood drives across the Commonwealth. Approximately 600 donors and bloodmobile staff members were reached with a positive message about beef's iron content and nutritional profile.

Fit for a Princess
Girl Scouts throughout Pennsylvania are learning about the importance of eating smart and being physically active thanks to checkoff dollars. The program focuses on including ZIP - zinc, iron and protein - in a young girl's diet. To

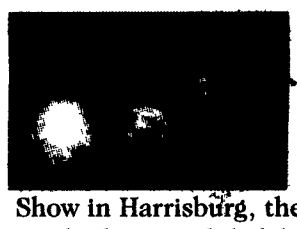
Partnerships
The PBC has established relationships with several state health organizations. Through these partnerships, health professionals are exposed to positive messages about beef and veal that they can share with clients. Partnership organizations include dietetic associations, family physician associations and family consumer science groups.

PROMOTION

Value Steaks
Pennsylvania retailers launched a new line of beef value cuts this past year with help from the PBC and IBP, Inc. The new cut concept was created using information from the industry's Muscle Profiling study that analyzed individual muscles from the chuck and round. These cuts have created an opportunity to market great tasting steaks, outside the rib and loin, from what has been traditionally merchandised as roasts.

Consumer Events
More than 50,000 samples of beef and veal were distributed in the past year at consumer and restaurant shows. Checkoff dollars funded sampling at events such as the PA Farm Show in Harrisburg, the Book and Cook Show in Philadelphia and State Restaurant Show in Pittsburgh. Easy beef and veal recipes were also demonstrated throughout the year at grocery stores and local television stations.



Veal 101
An all-encompassing farm-to-plate seminar was held for culinary school students, foodservice, retail and state beef council personnel. To increase awareness of the industry, participants visited a veal barn, learned about processing technology and worked with NCBA Culinary Center chefs to prepare veal dishes.

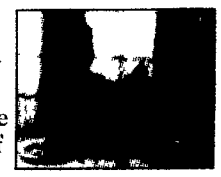
[illegible] 92 percent of consumers recognize the checkoff-funded "Beef. It's What's For Dinner"® advertising slogan. Television and radio advertising sought to build awareness of new heat-and-serve products, communicate the nutritional value of beef, and spur additional beef sales by featuring the experience of grilling beef. Television advertising reached 55 million targeted women more than 10 times last year.



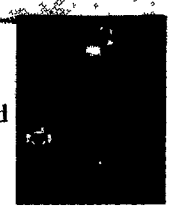
New Product Development
The checkoff-funded R&D Ranch™ Team is driving new beef product. More than 1,100 new beef products have come to market in the past four years. Last year, 474 new beef products hit the market vs. just 70 in 1997. In 2002, the new Homestyle Beef Pot Roast was introduced in 237 Kroger stores.

Grocery Stores
To stimulate beef sales, a summer beef grilling promotion comprised of radio advertising, public relations and in-store marketing was featured nationwide in 6,100 grocery stores. In-store messages reached 68 percent of the U.S. population through floor graphics, cart and meat case signs, in-store radio, and recipe and grilling information with the message, "Steak. Get Your Grill On." Radio advertising reached 46 percent of the population and 72 percent of targeted men about nine times. More than 363 million media impressions were made through public relations activities.

Restaurants
A checkoff-funded partnership with Dunkin' Donuts® resulted in the launch of a new Steak, Egg and Cheese breakfast sandwich, while a partnership with Quizno's® helped launch a Bistro Beef sub at 1,750 of its restaurants.

Veal
A checkoff-funded veal promotional tour featuring celebrity chefs David Burke and Norman Van Aken reached across the country. The chefs made guest appearances on television and radio programs and conducted veal recipe demonstrations for national and local print media.

[illegible] to [illegible] Beef Industry's Mark of Quality [illegible], which signifies that the products deliver great taste, quality and satisfaction. In cooperation with manufacturer partners, the checkoff program developed a beef Mark of Quality newspaper insert that netted a circulation of 40 million and included coupons for beef products carrying the Mark of Quality.



Health Professional Education
Beef nutrition information reached more than 8,000 health professionals and consumers through an ongoing partnership with "Speaking of Women's Health," an organization that educates women about their health, well-being and personal safety through its relationship with the checkoff-funded Council for Women's Nutrition Solutions (CWNS). Beef's nutrition message also is being distributed through a Speaking of Women's Health brochure called "Better Nutrition for Life," which includes health and nutrition tips, as well as a beef recipe. Wal-Mart printed 820,000 brochures for placement in special kiosks in 2,800 stores nationwide.

Beef Safety
Research involves developing and studying interventions that can reduce bacteria. Checkoff dollars have been invested in cattle cleaning and feed supplement research to eliminate bacteria before it can enter the processing facility. Pre-harvest cattle washing was tested using a variety of chemicals and wash cycles, one of which significantly reduced bacteria levels. A cattle feed supplement was tested, one of which was a seaweed compound that reduces E. coli levels as well as increases the USDA quality grade.

Human Nutrition
In collaboration with the USDA Nutrient Data Lab, the beef industry continues to research and update the nutrient values of beef products, including ground beef. New data released in August shows that 95 percent lean ground beef is lower in fat and calories and higher in many micronutrients than ground turkey. The 93 percent to 95 percent lean ground beef also meets government requirements for lean. Checkoff efforts are spreading the news of beef's nutritional value to consumers nationwide

254 Pa. FFA Members To Receive 2003 Keystone Degree

MILLIE BUNTING
Market Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Culminating their participation in FFA activities, 254 Pennsylvania FFA members will receive the coveted Keystone Degree during the annual state convention, which coincides with the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

The 2003 FFA Keystone degrees will be presented individually at a special ceremony Monday, Jan. 13, in the new banquet hall on the second floor of the Farm Show Complex. The ceremony is scheduled to begin at 4 p.m.

In past years, the ceremony took place in the Large Arena and all Farm Show-go'ers could sit in on the event and see the impressive array of blue jacketed young people receive their awards. Capacity of the banquet hall has been put at 1,500, so this year the attendance will be limited to recipients' family members and friends, plus FFA advisers and agribusiness supporters.

Out of about 8,000 FFA members in the state, only three to four percent each year qualify for the Keystone Degree. Only high school seniors or graduates are eligible to apply. They must have demonstrated leadership abilities and must have participated in a supervised agricultural experience (SAE) program.

Mike Brammer is the executive manager of the state FFA association which has offices in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) building on Cameron Street. FFA is conducted nationwide by the U.S. Department of Education with the Pennsylvania Department of Education (PDE) supervising the state activities. Christopher Weller is the PDE agriculture education adviser with offices at 333 Market St., Harrisburg.

Participating in this year's Keystone Awards ceremony will be Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes. A representative for the Pennsylvania Department of Education will also participate.

In addition to the Keystone Degrees, other awards will be presented. Four students, one from each region, will be recognized as regional star winners with one of these chosen for the Pennsylvania state star award. Three special Blue and Gold Awards will be presented to adult supporters of FFA, and honorary degrees will be presented to parents who have three or more children who have received Keystone degrees.

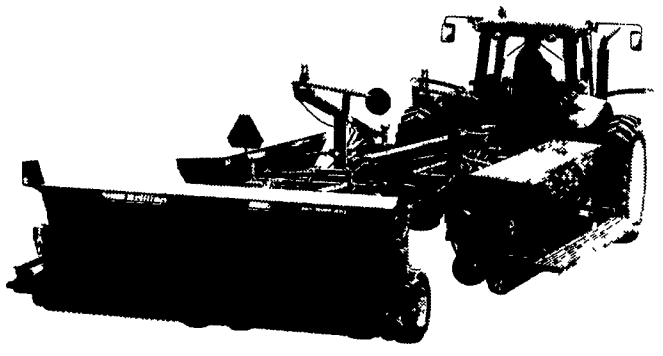
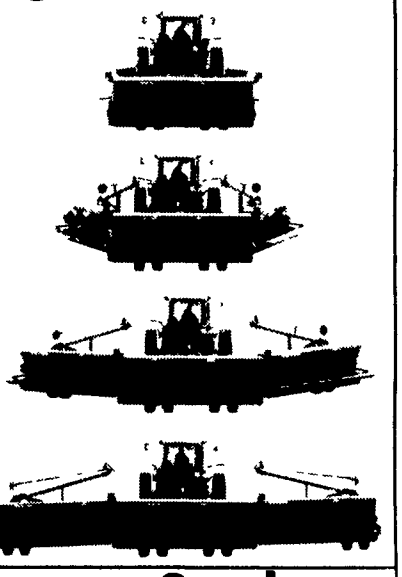
Brillion

TSH-212 Triple Seeder Carrier Seeding Width 36'

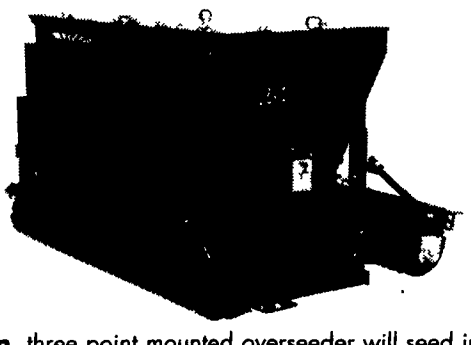




An Electric Clutch on each seeder allows you to turn individual sections on/off from the tractor cab.

High Capacity Meters spaced at a nominal 4 1/4" provide uniform placement of seed across the full width of the seeder. The shaft is plated for smooth operation and adjustment.

BOS Overseeder



This PTO driven, three point mounted overseeder will seed into existing stands of grass and establish new turf. Precise seed placement and seed to soil contact make this the ideal tool for seeding or overseeding fairways and roughs on golf courses or repairing lawns, parks, or athletic fields.

Landscape Seeder

The new LSP-6 Landscape Seeder is the latest addition to the Brillion lineup of landscape turfmaker seeders. The new design brings a 6-foot size to the traditional Turfmaker Series of seeders. With it's single landscape style box that is equipped with the polyethylene blade type agitator, this unit will be able to handle most turf seeds with ease

7 Questions Most Oil Suppliers Hope You Never Ask!

1. How may oil exceed the minimum specs? Ours Does! Did you know that most brands of oil on the market only meet the bare minimum API specs? You may not be getting the lubrication you need, resulting in added wear

2. Does my oil have the proper agents in to keep my engine clean? Ours Does! Did you know that many oils on teh market today that have little or no detergents to keep your engine clean? If you are buying oil from a mass merchandiser, you are likely not getting the cleaning power you need, this could lead to decrease performance and increased wear.

3. Does my oil have an agent that treats the metal to reduce wear and increase power? Ours Does! Most oil manufacturers are interested in mass marketing, and miss this point. Our aerospace technology pays for itself 2-3 times the cost of the product., by increasing fuel milage by 3-5 miles per gallon and decreasing wear by 40%.

4. Is my equipment being serviced at the proper intervals? Many oil suppliers do not have the technical support availabe to help you put together a good lube program., which results in throwing money away on maintenance and oil costs. Our Tech Support helps our customers put together a good lube program, free of charge!

5. Is my grease water resistant? Ours is! Many greases will not withstand wet surface conditions. If your grease doesn't resist washout it will lead to premature equipment failure.

6. What Base stock is my grease made from and is it fitted to my application? We match our customer's grease to their application every time Are you aware that there are at least 7 different types of base stock used in greases? If you don't make sure that the grease you are using is the best for your application, it could lead to premature equipment failure

7. Does my grease contain friction reducing agents? Ours Does! Here is another point many suppliers miss. This is another application of aerospace technology will save you time, equipment wear, and money.

Geneva Researchers Bring Precision Management To Vineyards

GENEVA, N.Y. — New York's grape industry is second only to apples as the state's largest fruit crop and is valued at $45.9 million. But this industry, and thousands of jobs with it, labor under the shadow of Guignardia biwelli, the fungus that causes black rot — one of the most serious diseases of grapes in the eastern U.S.

"If we didn't get good control of black rot, we couldn't grow grapes in New York," said Wayne Wilcox, Cornell University professor of plant pathology at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y.

Fortunately for growers, grape juice drinkers, wine connoisseurs, and the state of New York, black rot can be effectively controlled. But the traditional control strategy — applying as many as eight fungicide sprays at regular intervals from mid-May until August — was not good enough for Wilcox and fellow Experiment Station pathologists David Gadoury and Robert Seem.

The three plant pathologists turned their attention to a control strategy Wilcox describes as "overkill." "We started looking at spraying more critically, asking growers 'when do you really need to spray?'" he said.

After six years of painstaking research conducted in cooperation with graduate student Lisa Hoffman and technician Duane Riegel, the team is now able to provide growers with a detailed understanding of the biology of the disease and various factors that impact its control. These include when grapevines are most susceptible to the disease, when the disease is most susceptible to the fungicides used against it, the specific traits of these individual fungicides, and precisely when the vineyards should be treated to provide best control. They also proved what has long been suspected, that sanitation-removal of diseased tissues from the vine during the dormant pruning process — is an extremely valuable component of an integrated management program.

Their conclusion? An excellent level of control, the same as with the six-to eight-spray program, can be achieved with just two or three fungicide sprays, depending on the season provided that standard sanitation practices are employed in the vineyard. The conventional approach was to begin spraying when there were three to five inches of shoot growth, around the middle of May, and continue into August. The latest recommendation is to spray once at the start of bloom and once or twice more at two-week intervals. Additional sprays may be needed to manage other diseases, depending on the grape variety and the year.

Reducing the frequency, and thus the total amount, of applied pesticide has environmental and economic benefits. It saves the growers money, both in the cost of pesticide and the cost of labor, and reduces the amount of chemicals introduced into the environment. Reducing spray frequency also helps prevent fungicide resistance, and ensures that these materials will still be able to control black rot for years to come.

In the annually revised publication, "New York and Pennsylvania Pest Management Recommendations for Grapes," research and extension personnel from the region develop and disseminate the most current guidelines for disease control. While other states' official recommendations call for the same strategy New York used a decade ago, this region's guidelines have been continually refined as a result of the work of these Cornell researchers.

New Equipment Allows Easier Drip Tape Installation, Removal

DAWSON, Ga. — An Agricultural Research Service scientist has developed farm equipment that installs drip tapes on or just beneath the soil surface to precisely irrigate crops after seeds are planted. The same equipment can retrieve the drip tapes after crops are harvested. The apparatus works with reusable or disposable drip tape.

The new equipment was designed by Heping Zhu, an agricultural engineer at the ARS National Peanut Research Laboratory in Dawson, Ga. The device uniformly distributes drip tape, extracts water from it, holds and supports the tape, and guides and adjusts its installation.

The machinery chisels shallow trenches in the soil, places the tape in the trenches and then covers the tape with soil. Depth of drip tapes can be adjusted from 0 to 5 centimeters.

To retrieve disposable drip tapes, a special spool, mounted with a 3-point hitch behind the tractor, was developed to quickly remove the tapes from the unit. The inexpensive apparatus both installs and retrieves the tape.

During removal, Zhu's device layers the drip tape evenly across rotating spools, which squeeze out any remaining water. Retrieval speed can be adjusted by changing the tractor power takeoff speed. The drip tapes can then be reused during subsequent growing seasons.

In many crop production schemes, drip irrigation has advantages over other methods. It has been widely used in various applications throughout the world, resulting in crop yield increases and improved water conservation.

But surface drip irrigation's disadvantage is that users have to install and retrieve drip tapes every year, requiring high labor costs and more time.

So the new equipment should greatly benefit farmers using surface drip irrigation technology by increasing their crop yield and reducing their production costs. ARS is seeking a partner to further develop and commercialize the device.

'Once-A-Day' Campaign Promotes Local Farm Products

Jennifer Wilkins
Cornell Division
Nutritional Science

Cornell Cooperative Extension educators in Dutchess County, N.Y. have come up with a new idea for promoting local agriculture.

The "Once-a-Day Make It Local" campaign was developed by Les Hulcoop and Christine Sergent as a way to remind consumers to include local foods as a regular, year-round part of the diet.

Hulcoop and Sergent worked with Dutchess County legislators to issue a resolution on June 19, 2002 that proclaims, "Be it resolved, that the Dutchess County Legislature does hereby encourage Dutchess County residents to buy local farm products."

Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton thinks "Once-a-Day Make It Local" is a great idea. She has used the Dutchess County resolution as a model for a resolution submitted to the U.S. Senate in August. Just like the Dutchess County resolution, Clinton's "Once-a-Day" resolution promotes local farm products. It recognizes agriculture is a major industry in the U.S., contributing $82 billion to our gross domestic product in 2000. The resolution also states that:

- Farmers in every state produce a wide variety of local foods.
- Locally-grown, seasonal foods are fresh and wholesome, with superior taste and nutrition.
- Eating fresh foods in season is vital to a healthy diet, promotes health, and supports an active lifestyle.
- Reduced time from field to table allows farmers to harvest fully-ripened produce.
- This flavorful produce can be prepared with less fat, sugar, and salt.
- During the months of August, September, and October there is a tremendous selection of fresh, locally-grown produce.
- Local farms provide jobs, attract tourists, and re-circulate dollars into the local economy of our nation.
- Local produce can be found at many locations such as farmers' markets, community-supported agriculture farms, farm stands, local stores, and restaurants.
- If citizens of the U.S. would eat one item of local produce each day, every dollar spent on the produce would support independent family farms that contribute to the nation's economic health.
- Finally, Dutchess County, New York, has already begun a "Once-a-Day" program to encourage local residents to buy local produce in support of their local farmers and their own health.

Agency Debuts New Pear

KEARNEYSVILLE, W. Va. — A distinct blend of sugars, acids and other flavor compounds give a rich, aromatic taste to a new pear variety released by the Agricultural Research Service.

The new yellow and light-golden pear, named "Blake's Pride," was developed by horticulturist Richard Bell with the ARS Appalachian Fruit Research Station in Kearneysville, W.Va.

The beauty of this pear isn't just skin deep. The fruit is endowed not only with eating quality, but also with resistance to fire blight, a devastating pear disease. Caused by a bacterium native to North America, fire blight greatly limits pear production in the eastern and midwestern United States.

According to Bell, the U.S. pear industry relies heavily on just four major pear varieties, leaving much room, and demand, for new and improved alternatives. "Blake's Pride" now provides commercial pear growers and homeowners a new selection of disease-resistant pear.

Budwood of "Blake's Pride" is available free to nurseries on request by contacting Dr. Bell through the lab's web site at: http://afrsweb.usda.gov/DBell.htm

Since the variety has been certified as virus-free, Bell expects a growing demand from orchardists and homeowners beginning next year.

Pears mature and are harvested from early August through early October, with varieties farther south ripening earliest. "Blake's Pride" ripens 10 to 14 days after the widely grown "Bartlett" variety. California, Oregon and Washington state together produce most of the pears harvested in the United States.

OARDC Researcher Receives Tomato Award

FREMONT, Ohio — David Francis's tomatoes are redder, more nutritious and highly resistant to diseases. Now, they are also award-winners.

A scientist with the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC) in Wooster, Francis is the recipient of the 2002 Tomato Achievement Award, an honor conferred by the Mid-America Food Processors Association as a way of recognizing outstanding contributions to the development of the tomato industry.

The award ceremony took place in August during the Vegetable Crops Field Day at OARDC's Fremont branch.

OARDC is the research arm of Ohio State University's College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences.

"I'm surprised and truly honored," Francis said. "Considering the great work done by past recipients of this award, I hope it has been given to me for potential and not for accomplishments."

Jim Hudson, executive director of the Mid-America Food Processors Association, highlighted Francis's efforts toward the development of new tomato varieties that will greatly benefit the processing industry in the Mid-West and Mid-Atlantic states.

Francis, who is also a professor of Horticulture and Crop Science, has been searching for tomato breeds that offer more resistance to diseases and yield a high-quality product in a humid environment, such as that of the Great Lakes region.

OARDC's breeding program has already made important contributions to the tomato industry. Two breeding lines (Ohio 9816 and Ohio 9834) tolerant to race T1 of the harmful bacterial spot have recently been released. Likewise, Francis has noticed improvements in yield and fruit size, firmness and field storage, and color uniformity.

Since color is a defining attribute of quality for fresh and processed tomatoes, one of Francis's goals is to obtain genotypes that consistently produce fruit with a red, dark and saturated color.

According to Francis, color disorders (such as yellow shoulder) are the top nemesis of tomatoes intended for whole-peel and diced products, affecting as much as 65 percent of the crop.

Deep-red tomatoes are not only appealing and profitable; but also more nutritious. The pigments that make tomato red are pro-vitamin A and lycopene, a compound that has been found to fight cancer.

Francis has a doctorate from the University of California at Davis (1991), where he also worked as a postdoctoral research associate before joining OARDC in 1995.

"My biggest satisfaction," Francis told farmers who attended the field day, "is working with an industry that consists of family-owned businesses, many of which have been around for three generations."

New Effort To Boost Hydroponic Production, Marketing

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio — Ohio and Michigan hydroponic vegetable growers are joining forces to boost production and marketing, build stronger working relationships and increase consumer awareness through a new hydroponic marketing association and cooperative.

The Great Lakes Hydroponic Association and Marketing Cooperative, expected to be in place by spring, were born out of the Ohio State University Extension Hydroponic Vegetable Program. The program is designed to increase profitability of hydroponic greenhouse vegetable businesses by providing horticultural, marketing, business planning and greenhouse design support.

Mary Donnell, an Ohio State Extension agent for the Agricultural Business Enhancement (ABE) Center in Bowling Green, Ohio, will present details of the Great Lakes Hydroponic Association and the Marketing Cooperative to growers at the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress on Jan. 16 from 9:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. at the Toledo SeaGate Centre in Toledo, Ohio.

The annual conference and tradeshow will be conducted Jan. 15-17.

Donnell will introduce attendees to the new organization, which focuses on an association of hydroponic supporters seeking to inform and educate, as well as a cooperative of hydroponic vegetable growers looking to increase profits and be more competitive through market expansion.

"The association will conduct monthly meetings which will continue to strengthen the relationships among hydroponic growers in the Great Lakes region. Growers help one another by exchanging information on marketing and greenhouse production," said Donnell.

"The association will also bring in speakers to increase growers' knowledge of horticulture, greenhouse design and business planning."

"Through the cooperative, growers would work together to have enough product to be able to market to grocery store chains, consistently deliver the highest quality vegetables, as well as command a premium price through superior quality, long shelf life and skilled salesmanship," said Donnell.

For more information on the Great Lakes Hydroponic Association and Marketing Cooperative, contact Mary Donnell at (419) 354-6916 or donnell.8@osu.edu.

Greater Susquehanna Valley To Host This Year's Young Farmer Convention

LEWISBURG (Union Co.) — Mifflinburg/Lewisburg Young Farmers are hosting this year's Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association (PYFA) Winter Convention Feb. 4-6 here at the Best Western/ Country Cupboard Inn.

"Plans are well under way with tours, workshops, and a very exciting and interesting Ladies Program," according to a letter from Cathy and Duane Kling and Anna and Dennis Wolfe, convention chairpersons.

Boops

Gerald and Kathy Boop and family began farming 32 years ago In 1970, the old tie stall barn was renovated from 14 head to 24 head

Dennis has a full-time employee and his father Donald Spangler helping him with his herd of 75 cattle which average 20,000# of milk and 700# fat

They farm 370 acres in which they raise corn, soybeans and alfalfa.

In 1998, Dennis built a 8,200 sq ft. Green House Barn to house cows

Roller Mills

Consisting of two huge historic mills that were renovated and rented to many area crafters and dealers to sell their merchandise

You will find anything from antiques to Boyd's Bears! You name it, it s there You are truly in for a treat-visiting this Mill filled with streets of shops

Brookpark Bed & Breakfast

Ladies will be eating lunch and shopping here! If you ever decide to stay here, you will awaken to the crow of a rooster and the aroma of a country breakfast. All rooms are furnished with Pennsylvania House Furniture

In 1994, fire destroyed the Hackenberg's honey house, but they were able to relocate and rebuild a new 100 x 128 foot honey house Their extract, using a Cowen extractor that loads and unloads automatically Dave's wife Linda heads up the extracting, lifting the drips full of honey She also runs the office and does all the bookkeeping.

They average about 400 barrels of honey a year which is sold to Dutch Gold Hackenbergs also process their own wax They sell wax to local crafters and beekeepers too Bees wax is sold in blocks of 3 - 30#, most being sold to candlemakers

Mifflinburg Buggy Museum

Before the automobile became "king of the road," Pennsylvania ranked number two in producing horse-drawn vehicles One town in the state made its reputation and fortune in manufacturing fine quality carriages, wagons and sleighs Today the town of Mifflinburg boasts a truly rare survival, the William A. Heiss Coachworks Through the visionary talents of volunteers, the Buggy Museum consists of the Heiss Coachworks, Repository, family home, and, as of May 2001 the Charles McCool Snyder Education and Visitors Center The Mifflinburg Buggy Museum is one of only twelve craft/industrial museumns in the country with an original collection on its original site, and is believed to be the only carriage factory

In 1872, Catherine Heiss, unable to maintain the family farm after the death of her husband, bought a modest home on Green Street for herself, daughter Lizzie and son William. This two story, frame structure with its German siding was the family home until 1946 As William grew older he apprenticed with a buggy maker, opened his own shop in 1883 and married Anna Smith. Expanding his business in 1889, William purchased a larger "factory" in which he produced fine quality horse drawn vehicles until 1920 To display his vehicles, William had a Repository (showroom) built in 1895

After William's death in 1931 and Anna's death in 1946, the oldest Heiss son, Norman closed the factory and repository using them only for storage The house was rented for a few years, then it too was closed to await the passage of time

Wanting to celebrate the fullness of Mifflinburg's coach making heritage, a group of citizens approached Norman Heiss and his sons Owen and Glen. At 90 years of age, Norman remembered well the buggy factories of Mifflinburg including his own father's. Opening the doors of the Coachworks and Repository in 1978 was an unforgettable experience for volunteers. Behind the closed doors lay forty years of buggy making history-William's tools, hit and miss engine, horseshoes, tires, wheels, dashboards, upholstered seats, paints, catalogs for parts and his own account books. There were finished vehicles in runs and vehicles barely begun, there were bee hives and honey can labels, farm tools and more The house too retained much of its original furnishings, including Catherine Heiss' rope bed.

This is what visitors see today! A self-guided tour of the Visitor's Center explains buggy making and Mifflinburg as "Buggy Town" and introduces the family Guided tours of the home, factory and showroom let visitors experience life in Buggy Town through the lives of the Heiss family

Your visit will begin with an orientation video and exhibition in the Education and Visitors Center, which includes the hands-on workbench Your visit continues with a guided tour of the Heiss Coachworks, in operation from 1889 to1920, the Repository (showroom) built in 1895 and now housing a collection of horse-drawn vehicles, an 1870 house, which served as the Heiss family home from 1872 to 1946; and a reconstructed Carriage House.

Admission Adults $6 per person, Children (ages 7-17) $3 Group rate: (20 people or more) Adults $5, Children $2. It is recommended that groups allow 1 5 to 2 hours for a tour. Walk-in visitors (families, single people) should allow 1 5 hours.

Beetle Pheromone Lures Both Sexes

BELTSVILLE, Md. — Agricultural Research Service scientists have discovered a pheromone produced by male Colorado potato beetles — but attractive to both sexes — that may lead to new environmentally sound pest management methods to protect potatoes.

The Colorado potato beetle is the potato crop's most destructive pest, costing growers millions of dollars annually in crop losses and expenditures for synthetic pesticides.

The ARS scientists, led by entomologist Joseph C. Dickens with the Chemicals Affecting Insect Behavior Laboratory in Beltsville, Md., reported their discovery in the July issue of the Journal of Experimental Biology.

The Colorado potato beetle rapidly develops resistance to synthetic pesticides, many of which are now being reevaluated by regulators. The pheromone, however, is a natural byproduct of the beetle's metabolism, so the evolution of resistance to it is unlikely. Using the pheromone as a natural chemical for luring and killing the beetles may one day lessen the amount of synthetic insecticides required for pest control.

For 75 years, scientists in the United States, Canada and Europe have searched for scents that attract the Colorado potato beetle. The generally accepted view had been that a pheromone attractant would be found in females. Thus, the discovery of the attractant in males provides a new model for this beetle's chemical communication.

Since 2000, Dickens has identified several scents based on chemicals in potato plants themselves. Those scents were made into the first experimental plant lures to prove effective in field tests.

Under a cooperative research and development agreement with ARS, Trece, Inc., of Salinas, Calif., hopes to create products based on the newly discovered attractants that will exploit the insects' own communication system. New products based on the technology could include attracticides, or bait lures, formulated with small amounts of killing agents.

The scientists now will conduct more tests to determine when and how products using the pheromone-based attractant will transfer successfully from lab to field.

Manage Peach Orchards With Help From Extension Workshop

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio growers seeking the scoop on developing and managing peach orchards may find the answers at an Ohio State University Extension workshop in January.

The half-day workshop, to be held in conjunction with the 2003 Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress in Toledo, Ohio, is dedicated to the financial and agricultural management of one of Ohio's fastest growing fruit industries. The workshop will take place from 9 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. on January 17 at the Toledo SeaGate Centre.

Dick Funt, an Ohio State Extension small fruit specialist, said the workshop, supported by Ohio State research, will offer tips on how to establish a peach orchard and choose rootstock and cultivars, and provide the best tips on system management and how to get the most dollar for the fruit.

The 2003 Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress will be held Jan. 15-17. The annual conference and tradeshow is intended to educate and inform vegetable growers, marketers, consultants and others in the industry on the latest research, legislation, production and marketing of fruits and vegetables throughout the region and Canada.

For more information on the peach workshop, contact Dick Funt at (614) 292-8327 or funt.1@osu.edu.
